COLLEGE STUDENTS STRIKE

BANGOR, Me., Sept. 17.—Between 500 and 600 students of both sexes, comprising the three upper classes of the University of Maine, are on strike to-day against the new anti-hazing regulations. Recitations which were to begin to-day were suspended pending the result of a conference between a delegation of the students and the faculty.

When the term opened yesterday each of the students was handed a card to sign that contained this pledge:

"I, the undersigned, hereby agree so long as I am a student of the University of Maine to take no part in hazing."

The upper classmen refused point-blank to sign the pledge, even the girls revolting. As the faculty had decided that no student might enter the college who did not sign the pledge, a serious situation presented itself.

It was decided to ask for a modification of the pledge at to-day's conference.

The revolt was the outcome of class meetings in which the students resolved the decision that the demand was too arbitrary and not sufficiently defined.

Students Make Protest.

The term "hazing" may be applied to scores of harmless games, they say, that are honored college customs which work no injury to any one, which are expected by the freshmen, if not enjoyed.

The upper classmen say that while the students will be willing to cut out some of the most drastic methods of hazing freshmen, it is impracticable to abolish all forms, and that the refusal of the students to sign the pledge is on the ground that they would no doubt violate the pledge unconsciously and be liable to discipline which might affect their college standing.

In discussing the matter when the new regulation was adopted President Fellows said: "The practice of hazing freshmen in college has existed to a greater or less extent for centuries. Within the past fifty years there has been a great effort to eradicate from all education institutions a custom which results in many instances, in serious disorder and bad manners, if not in more serious consequences."

President Scents Trouble.

The subject has been carefully considered by the faculty and the trustees, and it has been decided that the best interests of the institution demand that hazing cease. Accordingly the trustees voted that hereafter no student be admitted who would not sign a pledge to abstain from hazing.

That the president scented trouble was evident from the notice posted yesterday to the effect that the hazing rule would not apply to the annual yesterranged voluntary class contests, such as the flag rush at the opening of the year, the peanut scrap, the frog pond scrap and other events.

Daughter of Kaiser to Wed Austrian Archduke

Princess Victoria Louise of Germany, who, it is reported, will marry Archduke Charles Francis Joseph.

VIENNA, Sept. 17.—Marriage plans for to the throne of Austria, are being made, the union of Victoria Louise, daughter of according to a report emanating from court Emperor William of Germany, and Archcircles here to-day.

Duke Charles Francis Joseph, second heir The German princess, winsome girl of eighteen, is the idol of her parents, and has had a very sensible bringing up. A year ago it was rumored that an alliance between her and the young King Manuel of Portugal was contemplated.

WISCONSIN IS TRIFLE CHILLY TOWARD TAFT

By WILLIAM HOSTER.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 17.—The President arrived at 5 a. m., but slept until 7 o'clock, lived after his day at Chicago, but happy. He declared it was the greatest reception ever extended to him, and rejoiced over the way he was treated by the people of all parties.

The President was warmly but not enthusiastically received here. It is significant that at the Chamber of Commerce, without referring to the tariff, Mr. Taft declared that there was no idea that the President has great power. "He has," he said, "but there are great limitations to that power, and the President is compelled to spend a lot of time finding what those limitations are."

He declared that he was making this trip to get into touch with the people of the country, in order that they may learn that he is an ordinary mortal and that this may encourage a feeling of greater charity toward the chief executive.

At the Soldiers' Home the President extolled the virtues of the veterans and, referring to the school children who greeted him yesterday in Chicago and in Milwaukee to-day, said he hoped the lesson of the old soldiers would have influence on the

THE EEL MADE FAVORITE FOR FREE-FOR-ALL

RACE TRACK, Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 17.—For the final day of the Grand Circuit racing here the track was in fine condition, but a high wind interfered somewhat with fast time. The feature race was the free-for-all pace in which Aileen Wilson, Lady Maude C. and Copa de Oro were in against the Canadian wonder, The Eel, who was a strong favorite, has not been beaten this season.

In addition to the 2:06 pace, unfinished from yesterday, there was the 2:13 and 2:16 trotting classes, both having small fields. The results for Columbus has already begun, many of the horses having been shipped to the Ohio city last night.

TOLSTOI IN MOSCOW AFTER MANY YEARS

MOSCOW, Sept. 17.—Count Leo Tolstoi, who celebrated his eighty-first birthday last week, for the first time in several years has visited Moscow. He spent the night in his Moscow residence and left to-day for a nearby town to visit his friend, M. Pashkoff, the leader of the religious movement among the better classes, which resembles Tolstoism. The Count appeared to be in vigorous health.

EXPERTS TO BATTLE FOR NEW JORDAN TRIAL!

Court Sets Sept. 25 for Hearing the Defense on the Ground That Juror White's Insanity Invalidates Old Verdict.

Another determined effort to save Chester S. Jordan, the convicted Somerville wife-murderer, from the electric chair will be made on Saturday morning, September 25, when the motion of the defence for a new trial on the ground of insanity of one of the Jordan jurors will be heard. This decision was announced by District Attorney John J. Higgins of Middlesex County to-day.

The hearing on the motion is expected to develop into a battle of medical experts and alienists, who will be summoned as witnesses to testify whether or not Juror Willis A. White of Maynard, at present a patient in Bloomingdale Insane Hospital at Worcester, was sane or insane at the time of the trial and verdict.

The hearing will take place before Judges Stevens and Bell at the Middlesex County Courthouse at East Cambridge.

There will be every legal resource used on each side. A big battery of counsel for the defence will oppose District Attorney Higgins and Assistant District Attorney Charles E. Weir.

Bartlett eLads Defense.

Heading the Jordan lawyers will be General Charles W. Bartlett, the senior counsel, who arrived home from Europe to-day on the Cymric. Associated with him in the case have been Attorneys Hayes H. Pratt, Jeremiah F. Sullivan and Senator Richard F. Teeling of Charlestown.

It is expected that General Bartlett or Attorney Pratt will offer the actual argument before the two justices on the motion for a new trial.

As the motion is based on the question of the sanity or insanity of Juror White at the time of the trial it is stated that medical and alienist testimony will be introduced for and against the motion.

About two weeks after the Jordan jury returned its verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree Juror White was committed to Bloomingdale Insane Hospital by Judge Keyes of Concord District Court. The Juror was then in a pitiable condition. He raved and shouted and had to be restrained at times by the officers. His committal action in Concord aroused a big line of his hearing were retailed at length in the newspapers on account of the pregnant bearing of his case on the Jordan trial.

Date Is Set Ahead.

Two months ago the Jordan counsel filed a motion for a new trial on the ground that Juror White was insane during the Jordan trial. It was first announced that the hearing on this motion would take place to-morrow but now, after consultation of Judge Aiken, the date is specifically set for Saturday, September 25.

HUNT BANDITS WHO BLEW UP EXPRESS CAR

LEADVILLE, Col., Sept. 17.—A posse to-day is trailing five masked bandits who at midnight last night attempted to rob the second section of Denver & Rio Grande No. 5 passenger train, four miles west of Malta, a small station near Leadville. The express car was dynamited. According to the trainmen no booty was secured. The robbers compelled the train crew to aid them in forcing their way into the express car, the door of which was finally blown open.

Three of the robbers rushed in, covering the express messenger with revolvers. Several charges of dynamite were placed under the safe, but without result except to wreck the interior of the car.

After firing a volley the robbers fled in the darkness. It is said the safe contained a large sum of money.

Pueblo, Colo., Sept. 17.—The train held up at Malta left here yesterday morning. According to local express men the second section would not carry large sums of money unless a special shipment was made. A report that the robbers secured $20,000 to $25,000 is discredited by the local express men.

REINSTATE LABOR UNIONS TO-NIGHT

Two of the five trade unions recently suspended from membership in the Building Trades Department of the Boston Central Labor Union, and later from the C. L. U. itself, the Sheet Metal Workers No. 17 and the Electrical Workers No. 103 will be reinstated at to-night's meeting of the Building Trades Department under an agreement reached by the central organizations.

AGED REGISTER ADMITS THEFT ASKS MERCY

Captain Joseph P. Thompson of Lowell, aged eighty, for thirty-five years register of deeds of Lowell, was to-day declared by Judge King in Superior Court at East Cambridge, to be mentally sound, when his attorneys, McIntyre and Wilson, tried to have the court prevent the aged man being arraigned for the larceny of $1,000 from George B. Brown.

Captain Thompson's attorneys detailed his splendid war record and called Drs. Bernard of Lowell and Means of the Chelsea Soldiers' Home to prove that the aged man was suffering from senile insanity.

District Attorney John J. Higgins declared Thompson had used his office to make money improperly.

To Judge King Thompson said that he had held the register's office for thirty-five years at $2,500 a year. Judge King decided he should be arraigned, whereupon, in a choking voice, Captain Thompson pleaded guilty. The Judge delayed passing sentence for one week.

SUES AUTOMOBILE HOST FOR $22,000

NORTH ATTLEBORO, Sept. 17.—Dr. Thomas Ford has brought suit for $20,000 against Louis Rowell, and the case will be tried next Wednesday. Ford seeks to recover for injuries alleged to have been received while riding in an automobile of the defendant, which, he alleges, was recklessly driven. Ford was injured. The defendant is the son of one of North Attleboro's wealthiest manufacturers.

4 DEAD, 20 BURIED IN BUILDING WRECK

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Four men are so far known to be dead, more than a dozen were more or less seriously injured, and four others are missing, following the collapse of a three-story stone building in the course of construction at No. 2,200 Milwaukee avenue to-day, on which thirty men were working. At least a score were buried beneath the ruins.

Men were swept from the flooring and hurled to the basement in a shower of stone. Only the north wall remained intact. The injured were removed to hospitals.

Four bodies have been recovered by the police and fire departments, working with picks and axes and assisted by men, women and children. The moans and cries of the men, many of whom were pinned beneath rafters and portions of the floor and tons of stone and brick, could be heard for several blocks.

SHIBE PARK, Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 17.—The manager and the Detroit players united to-day for both were of the gloom variety.

The Tigers are sore over yesterday's defeat by the Athletics and started preparations early this morning to turn the tables and rope the upstart baron of Connie Mack's aggregation being made at their expense.

Early in the morning there was little hope of the second game in the series being played, as it was cloudy and at times a drizzle fell. This continued till late morning, but there was no stopping the dippy Philadelphia fans, who started for the grounds early, and the way they came in promised a larger crowd than yesterday, which came pretty near being a Monday afternoon record.

The feeling is strong that "Ty" Cobb will not have been retained in Philadelphia, and with this nothing but four straight will satisfy Manager Mack or the Philadelphia fans. Detroit was outplayed yesterday, and this satisfied the fans that the same can be done throughout the series. The same precautions to protect the Tigers and Cobb were taken to-day with more than two hundred uniformed officers between the crowd and the players and plain clothes men minding to and fro to nip any outbreak of feeling right in the start.

HORSE THIEF FOES CALLED TO HUNT

Phineas Hayes visited Indiana to-day and stole a black horse and open buggy belonging to Charles H. Turner, of Vale street. One of the town assessors, from the shed in the rear of Memorial Hall. The chief of police and the head of the detective force in his auto have started in pursuit of the thieves and the president of the society to suppress horse thieving, Henry D. Humphrey, has called out his men to join in the chase.

HEARST ESTATE WINS MEXICAN LAND LAWSUIT

CITY OF MEXICO, Sept. 17.—Much interest has centred here in the contest between Colonel Greene and the Hearst estate over the possession of land in the State of Chihuahua. The contest culminated in the decision of the Supreme Court of Mexico against Colonel Greene and the Pearson syndicate in favor of the Hearst estate and other allied land interests.

Colonel Greene is the individual who became notorious through his visit to Boston some years ago with the avowed intention of exterminating Thomas W. Lawson.

Colonel Greene gained further notoriety by his effort to float various wildcat enterprises and to run his Chihuahua land & Lumber Company into the hands of a receiver.

When Colonel Greene mortgaged the Sierra Madre Land & Lumber Company in order to raise securities foreseu he included as within his properties part of the possessions of the Hearst estate and of other land owners. The Hearst estate and the other land owners were unwilling to assist in the flouting of Colonel Greene's securities by allowing his mortgage to include some 30,000 acres of land which he did not own, but which they did.

And so an injunction was asked to prevent the sale of these lands under the foreclosure of this mortgage. The local courts, subject to the influence of certain officials in the State of Chihuahua, who are stockholders in the Greene enterprises, refused the injunction. But the Supreme Court of Mexico reversed the local courts and set aside their decision.

As all of the costly mills and buildings of the Sierra Madre Land & Lumber Company are located on the property of the Hearst estate, this decision will be of particular interest to the holders of the securities which the Pearson syndicate has been attempting to float.

The decision of the Supreme Court, however, will give all honest American property holders in Mexico further assurance of the justice and integrity of the government and the security of all legitimate investments.

BOY BANDIT LOSES FIGHT FOR PARDON

Governor Draper has refused to grant a hearing on the petition for a pardon for Everett Willis, the boy bandit, who is serving a long term in the Charlestown State Prison. The petition is from the prisoner's family, who moved into Rhode Island from Connecticut to be near their brother in Everett and his brother Herbert started this contest. The Willis brothers have been the terror of Everett and vicinity in southeastern Massachusetts since the gang of which they were the chief lights. Herbert was killed in the fight and Everett was sentenced to fifteen years in the state prison. Ever since the attempt of his brother to break into Revere Keepers were alert and one was mortally wounded. Everett was shot twice himself and when he recovered took his dead brother's place in a cell.

He was only seventeen years old when the police guardroom battle was fought. His family has made several attempts to obtain a pardon for him. His youth has been pleaded and it is urged that he was under absolute domination of his brother. Everett has been a model prisoner at Charlestown, but Governor Draper sees no reason for his receiving executive clemency.

OUT OF WORK, DIES BY ACID NEAR BEACH

Lying face downward and with a bottle which held carbolic acid a few feet away, the unidentified body of a well-dressed man was discovered by laborers at Point of Pines at 7 a. m. today, between the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad and the State boulevard. He was about forty-five years old. The workmen thought the man was sick and notified the Park police.

Patrolman Hill went there in an automobile and found that the man was dead. When Medical Examiner Magrath reached the scene with several officers they searched the grounds and found an eight-ounce bottle containing dregs of carbolic acid and an unsigned note which, it is thought, was written by the man, stating that he was despondent and out of work and without money and that he took his life for that reason.

The victim was 5 feet 8 inches in height, with brown hair and moustache and brown eyes. He wore a blue serge sack coat, dark trousers, neglige shirt, white standing collar, blue polka dot four-in-hand necktie, black shoes and stockings and a black derby hat. The coat had a tag attached bearing the name of Wentworth-Brown of Philadelphia. Medical Examiner Magrath said he had been dead about twelve hours.

Early Friday evening last night the dogs around the Grand View Hotel at Point of Pines barked continually, and it was probably at that time that the man ended his life.

RUSH REPORT ON RAILROAD BRIDGE CASE

A board of United States army engineers will submit to Secretary of War Dickinson next week its report on the question of raising the Boston & Maine Railroad bridges over the Charles River at the North Station, in accordance with the War Department plans to facilitate navigation. The War Department engineers recommended that the bridges be raised to give a clearance of twenty-three feet, which brought forth the protest from President Lucius Tuttle of the Boston & Maine that if such an order was enforced the North Terminal Station would have to be moved to Charlestown.

Several sets of plans have been submitted to the board by Boston & Maine engineers and have been rejected. One was from Engineer Shaw of the Boston & Maine and from Engineer Hodgson of the Bascule Bridge Company. The latest plan, which was submitted at another meeting just held by the board at the office of Lieutenant Colonel Edward W. Barry.

At the meeting were President Tuttle and Engineer Shaw of the Boston & Maine, Chairman Smith and Engineer Hodgson of the Harbor and Land Commission and representatives of the Wellington-Wild and Bay State Coal Companies. The new plans submitted offer a solution of the navigation problem without raising the railroad bridges twenty-three feet. It is hoped that among these last sets of plans one will be found approved by the Board to the Secretary of War.

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS

Up to Midnight, London Time

One Gramme of Radium Made in Eighteen Months.

VIENNA—The total output for eighteen months of the government's radium mine at Joachimsthal—ten grammes on about 175 grains—of radium chloride, equivalent to one gramme or 15.5 grains of pure radium, has been sent to the Ministry of Public Works. It will be used for scientific purposes. It is valued at several thousand dollars.

American Tourists Scared.

LONDON—Many Americans who are about to return home from Europe are scared by the cabled stories about the customs inquisition at New York. They are refraining from taking European souvenirs or buying European clothes or other things on which duties are levied. Some of the merchants are annoyed, but some treat the matter humorously. A gunsmith on the Oceanic, for instance, professed to be almost scared to death lest he be assessed duty on his gun. It is a European production, grown on the knee of his boy, who fell while he was bicycling and skinned his patella.

Defence by Lord Rosebery.

LONDON—The Earl of Rosebery, sometime Premier of England, has written the preface to a pamphlet reproducing his recent speech at Glasgow, which justifies his disappearance in politics after his withdrawal, on the ground that the present crisis is one of those occasions when common honor and honesty compel anybody having deep convictions on a withheld counsel from his countrymen. Lord Rosebery declares it is untrue that he left the Liberal party. He says that, on the contrary, the party left him.

Airship Flies Out to Sea.

BRACCIANO, Italy—An Italian military airship made a remarkable ascent here. It remained aloft two hours and thirty minutes and maintained a speed of thirty kilometres (about nineteen miles) an hour. The navigator ventured to go out over the sea and eventually landed with admirable precision in front of the ship's shed. This is the first time that a dirigible has made a cruise over the sea.

Demand Preferential Trade.

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—The congress of the Chambers of Commerce of the British Empire has adopted by a large majority a resolution favoring preferential treatment for the commerce of the United Kingdom, the colonies and dependencies on a reciprocal basis. The congress pronounced it a matter of present practical importance and recommended commissioners to inquire and report on the subject.

Samuel Gompers at Milan.

MILAN—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, accompanied by J. W. Sullivan of New York and David Lubin of California, has visited the workmen's organizations here. Mr. Gompers has devoted some attention to the amelioration of conditions for intending immigrants to America.

Kaiser Rises Before Dawn.

MERGENTHEIM, Germany—The manoeuvres of the German army came to a close today. Emperor William, who was keenly interested in the manoeuvres, arose at 4:30 o'clock in the morning and started out, while it was still dark, in a motor car to witness the advance of the Blue Army.

$2,500 to Stand Still in Air.

LONDON—The latest of the numerous prizes offered through the British Aeroplane Club for aviation feats is one of $2,500 for the first English aviator keeping stationary for a minute under normal conditions at an altitude of fifty feet.

SUFFRAGISTS IN LYNN VOTE TO DEFY MAN

More militant than their Boston sisters, the Lynn suffragists are going right ahead to force the issue of open-air suffrage meetings in that city, even if the Boston women give withdrawn from the case.

Posters are being prepared to-day for the Lynn Equal Rights Club announcing that the club will hold an open-air meeting in some public place a week from tomorrow, despite Chairman Hawkes of the Park Commission. The exact place of the open-air meeting is kept secret. It will be up to Chairman Hawkes to find the meeting and then take what action he sees fit. The posters will be headed: "Tyranny is Dead in Lynn."

At a spirited meeting of the Lynn women a letter was read from Mrs. Richard Fitz Gerald, secretary of the Equal Rights Association of Boston, saying that as a result of the Lynn trouble, the Boston suffragists had decided to withdraw from the proposed demonstration. This demonstration was to take place to-morrow.

The open-air meeting committee of the Lynn Equal Rights Club is composed of three members. Among the most radical orders are Miss Ellen Wetherell, Mrs. Jane Jones and Miss Clara H. Craig. Susanna W. Berry, sister of Miss Wetherell, is another determined member of the meeting at which these orders were laid was held at the home of Mrs. Berry and Miss Wetherell at No. 103 Oaklin street.

The Lynn club recently petitioned the city commission for permission to hold an open air meeting on Lynn Common. The members of the club say that Chairman Hawkes, without submitting the matter to the commission, forbade the meeting on his own responsibility. The club raises the question whether the chairman alone has the right to act for the whole commission. In addition, the club holds that the Common is a public meeting place.

These points are the ones they seek to clear up. They invited the Boston suffragettes to be on hand in the Lynn Common when the Lynn club says it will hold its open-air meeting. The Boston suffragettes, evidently desirous of not getting into a row, have declined to go against legalized authority. They say if the Lynn women want to go on with the meeting and get arrested, they must legalized authority in order to test this question."

OBEYED GHOST; STABBED MAN

"A ghost told me to stab him—a ghost that came to the night."

That was the reason given in the Newton Police Court to-day by Pasquale Dobbins for stabbing his friend, Gaetena Corsetti, while the latter slept, four times on the night of last Labor Day. The wounds were of such a desperate character that the injured man has been fighting for his life ever since in the Newton Hospital.

Dobbins disappeared on Labor Day, but returned last night. He was arrested by Policeman Mills and when arraigned in court to-day and charged with assault and intent to kill he pleaded guilty and said he had been told to do the stabbing by a ghost. He was held in $10,000 bail for the Grand Jury. He will be examined as to his sanity.

BEACHEY ON WIRES WITH TRAIN BELOW

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Sept. 17.—Suspended from the telegraph wires over a railroad track, while a passenger train thundered beneath him, was the thrilling experience of Lincoln Beachey, aeronaut, in his airship. The aviator ascended from the fair grounds, and while maneuvering over the gimpsie tried to cross the railroad tracks. He was too low and the rudder caught in the telegraph wires.

The smoke and cinders from the engine almost blinded Beachey and he had great difficulty in keeping the machine from crashing. After the train passed he was taken from his precarious position.

JUNK MAN GETS DEATH WARNING

A threatening placard, signed "Black Hand," was found by Patrolman Dickinson of City Square Station to-day tacked on the front door of Louis Frank's junk store at No. 3 Gray street, Charlestown.

Frank lives in the West End of Boston and is home for the Jewish New Year festivities. Patrolman Dickinson took the placard to City Square Station, where it was held for investigation.

The placard consisted of a paper twenty inches square, neatly lettered:

"The Wages of Sin Are Death. Beware. Look Out."
MUCKER.
"Signed" "President of Black Hand."

It was ornamented with drawings of a skull crossbones, an hour-glass and a three hand. Next to the black hand was the phrase "Good Luck."

POLITICIAN IS SHOT TO DEATH

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The authorities of Suffolk county were to-day confronted with a baffling mystery in the murder of Irving A. Nelson, one of the most prominent politicians on Long Island, who was found shot to death on a lonely road half a mile from his home at Islip. He had been killed by a shot in the back with a number of slugs from an old-fashioned muzzle-loading shotgun.

A preliminary investigation began by the coroner and the police activities to-day have led to the detention of Nelson's wife, a pretty young woman, and Augustus Schmertz, a young man who lives at the Nelson home as a boarder. They were held as possible witnesses.

SEAMAN RESCUED IN MID-OCEAN

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—The White Star liner Creti arrived here from the Mediterranean to-day with a story of a thrilling rescue in mid-ocean, twelve miles from the Azores. Joachim Constantin, a seaman, jumped overboard and fell into the sea. Many of the women passengers were on deck at the time and shrieked at the sight. Finally the ship was nearly half a mile away before the engines could be stopped. Third officer Shaw and five men put off in a boat, and as they reappeared with Constantin there was a burst of cheering from the decks.

TAFT IN WISCONSIN, TO TALK TARIFF WITH FOES OF PAYNE BILL

rising generation in any hour of the nation's need.

The President visited the Auditorium, and was welcomed by 5,000 school children, who cheered him along the streets. A brief call was also made at Marquette College.

Plea for Postal Banks.

The party was not at the Fair Grounds by Senators Lafollette and Stevenson. There were many good words, but little enthusiasm. A female band played "The Star Spangled Banner."

President Taft made a plea for a postal savings bank in his address at the fair grounds. "I am here," said he, "to uphold the doctrine of the postal savings banks, because I believe they will fill in this country a long felt want."

He outlined the proposition and recalled the platform declaration of the Republican party favorable to such instructions. He declared he was not attacking bankers, a good many of whom object to the postal savings bank, and was not hoping towards socialism. I am not a socialist, nor willing to have the government do anything that private citizens can do as well or better. But we have passed beyond the belief that the government should be no more than our police force. The government is especially fitted to do this work."

Wouldn't Cripple Other Banks.

The President declared that the great Post Office Departments offers a nucleus for the savings bank.

The government can afford that it be done cheaply, and nobody else can do it," said he. "I do not think postal banks would drive other banks out of business.

Chicago Is Hub Now, Says the President

Ialways like to visit Chicago because it is in a sense the centre of the country. Much more than Boston it is the hub about which many people and many interests revolve.
—President Taft in Chicago Speech.

I believe in the discriminating sense of the American people. In fourteen States there are $2,000,000 deposits in savings banks. But when we consider that there are only $2,000,000 in all the other States and territories, it shows conclusively that the savings banks in thirty-two States and territories are inadequate. In New England there is one savings bank account to every two people, and only one to 157 in other parts of the country."

Surprise had been expressed that the President did not talk tariff at Chicago. He seems to hesitate about discussing the subject. All the papers of the West are commenting on this. It is believed he must talk tariff before the day is over, for he is now in one of the States where the Payne law is most violently opposed, and to-night there will be an address at a meeting at Winona, Minn., the home of Representative Tawney, who is in danger of defeat because of his support of the President's tariff policy.

Senators Out in the Cold.

A significant feature of to-day's initial reception was that neither of the Wisconsin Senators participated and that the President had invited former Governor Hoard to ride through the State with him instead of any present Republican leader in public office. Hoard is a tariff organization man, while Davidson and pretty nearly everyone else in Wisconsin is an insurgent.

A note at the Orchestra Hall meeting in Chicago last night that should not be lost sight of is that the President's reference to Roosevelt and his policies received the loudest and most prolonged burst of applause of the night. In Boston Tuesday night the mention of Roosevelt's name invoked not a ripple of applause, but it still has all its old potency in the West and this is a shock to Taft or any one else to conjure with.

The President was waited on in his car at 8 a. m. by a committee headed by Col. J. P. Quarles. Entering automobiles, the party was driven to the Auditorium, thence to the Press Club, to the Chamber of Commerce, to Marquette University, to the Soldiers' Home and to the State Fair Grounds, where the President looked over the agricultural exhibits.

Goes to Tawney's Home.

To-day's program calls for stops at Lacrosse, Wis., and Winona, Minn., the latter town is the home of Chairman Tawney of the Appropriations Committee, and the President is going there largely to refute the report that he disapproved of Mr. Tawney's position on the tariff bill.

President Taft is highly delighted over the reception he received in Chicago. He was most deeply impressed with the fifteen miles of schoolchildren, who greeted him with waving flags and cheers. That the President made the biggest hit at the baseball game, for Chicago is the city of fans and Taft was thoroughly at home on the ball grounds.

BREAKS PROBATION; GETS TWO MONTHS

For refusing to obey the orders of Probation Officer Hager, Leslie Fairfield yesterday was sentenced to two months in the House of Correction in the Cambridge court to-day for stealing $40 from Miss Helen Payne of No. 90 Inman street. Leslie was arrested several weeks ago, and was told by Hager that if he paid back the money in weekly installments he would not be further prosecuted. He paid one installment of $2 and then disappeared.

FREE AERONAUTS TAKEN FOR SPIES

FARMERS' RECORDS TO HELP CENSUS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Heart to heart talks with farmers is the latest method the census bureau has inaugurated to make the census of 1910 as accurate as possible in matters pertaining to agricultural subjects. A circular letter urges the farmers to keep records from now until the census enumerators call.

NEW WAY TO WIN A WIFE

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—When Ralph B. Lantz of Milton, Wayne County, Indiana, finds a girl he would like to marry he gets the license first and asks her consent afterwards. Miss Lauretta Williams, a telephone operator at the Hotel Mayer, did not know she was expected to be married until to-day, when she saw her name in the published list of licenses.

At the same time Mr. Lantz, prospected looking and with the license in his hand, called on her. Indignant because of the publicity, Miss Williams took the license back to the clerk of the county building and left instructions that soon she would be married she would tell the clerk so herself.

Meanwhile Lantz got another license. This girl is rich, he confided to the clerk, to the tune of $15,000. The second girl Lantz has never seen. He gets knowledge. Miss Evans came to Chicago for a visit and Mr. Lantz and Lantz learned something of her fortune. The hotel clerk also is sleeping.

"That's the way to win a wife," said Lantz. "Do things in a masterly way and the girls worth having will fall into the altar instead of snatching the license and causing for the county clerk's office."

Lantz is a traveling man for a candy firm and says he earns a big salary.

FOUND DEAD IN ALLEY.

John P. Lyons, a peddler, forty years old, No. 824 Cabeley street, East Boston, was found dead in an alley way near his home to-day. The body was removed to the Noble street morgue and Medical Examiner Magrath notified. Death was probably due to natural causes.

CYMRIC BACK WITH TOURISTS

The White Star liner Cymric arrived to-day from Liverpool, bringing 207 saloon and 681 steerage passengers. Among the foreign were many returning tourists, including General Charles W. and Mrs. Bartlett, Mrs. Thomas Bailey Aldrich and her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Talbot Aldrich, who have been motoring in Great Britain and on the Continent. Ralph S. Bartlett, the Duke of Abruzzi, Charles K. Fox, the furniture shop manufacturer, and family, George E. Lawrence and family, the Reverend W. J. O'Neill of Wilkes-Barre, Charles F. Shattuck, Boston real estate dealer; Professor A. M. Peaslee of Technology and Professor Ira M. Price and ten students from Chicago University.

Professor Price and his students were home touring Turkey. They arrived in Constantinople six days after Abdul Hamid was deposed. They arrived in Jerusalem the day that city fell. Professor Price declares that only the presence of the military saved Americans from being massacred by the revolutionists.

Among the 681 steerage passengers on the Cymric the lowest number of races was represented on any passenger list coming into Boston at that proposition. There were 266 Scandinavians, 201 English speaking immigrants, 55 Jews, and 151 representatives of all other countries.

THIRD DEGREE IN DEATH CASE

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 17.—After the confession of thirteen suspects in connection with the murder of Billie Theresa Phillips and Ferdinand Infosino and the wounding of Fanny Infosino, the police are to-day concentrating their faith to clews surrounding Michael Rizza, a former boarder in the Infosino home, and his brother, Theodore. Mr. Rizzo, a former boarder in the Infosino home, and his brother, Theodore. Mr. Rizzo left for Italy, and it is said that he was engaged to the murdered girl. Theodore Rizzo, who was in Monterey last night, was advised of the disappearance of his wife through a dispatch from Mrs. Richmond, the telegram stating that the windows of her residence were closed and broken and an attempt had been made to force the door. The distressed Mrs. Richmond begs to seek the protection of the government, and it is said that she was granted immediately to come to Monterey.

RICH PITTSBURGER SUDDENLY INSANE

PITTSBURG, Sept. 17.—R. P. Young, a rich marble decorator went crazy in the office of the Raymond Hotel and insisted on passing around thousand-dollar checks indiscriminately to the bellboys. Manager Dengler of the hotel phoned to the police and then spent a strenuous half hour separating the checks from their owners. Young, having account in the First National Bank and all checks would have been honored without question. When taken to police headquarters Young insisted on acting Chief Hazel of Detectives William Elmore a $5,000 check. Young was placed in a hospital by his family to-day.

MOB AUSTRIAN CONSULATE

MONTEREY, Mex., Sept. 17.—It is reported here that the Austrian Consulate in the city of Saltillo has been attacked by a mob and that other political disorders have also occurred in connection with the celebration of Independence day in that city.

Mr. Richmond, American Consul at Saltillo, who was in Monterey last night, was advised of the disturbances in their city through a dispatch from Mrs. Richmond, the telegram stating that the windows of her residence were closed and broken and an attempt had been made to force the door. The distressed Mrs. Richmond begs to seek the protection of the government, and it is said that she was granted immediately to come to Monterey.

OLDEST CATHOLIC BISHOP IS DEAD

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 17.—The Right Rev. William George McCloskey, Catholic Bishop of Louisville, and the oldest Catholic prelate in the United States, both in years and service, died at 1 a. m. to-day here. November 10, 1827. He was ordained priest at St. Mary's College, Maryland, and was ordained priest in 1850. After a period of study as professor of moral theology and sacred scripture in St. Mary's College he was appointed the first president of the American College at Rome in Pope Pius IX. He was consecrated Bishop of Louisville in 1858.

MITCHELL, LEADING ELK, FOUND DEAD

LOWELL, Sept. 17.—James A. Mitchell, a prominent Elk and former exalted ruler of the Lowell lodge, was found dead in the bath room of his home at No. 11 Doral street to-day by his wife. Gas from a radiator filled the room and the police say that Mitchell was a suicide. They attribute the act to despondency because of ill health.

COULD NOT GET STRENGTH BACK

Every Sufferer from Debility Will Be Interested in the Cure of This Rhode Island Woman.

Some women recover their strength very slowly after an acute illness, after childbirth and other conditions of extreme debility. What is needed to assist nature is a tonic and, especially in the case of the nursing mother, care must be taken that it is a safe tonic, one from which the increased strength of the mother will be shared by the child. Debilitated persons are very liable to have weak digestions and in such cases the tonic remedy must be one that is acceptable to the most delicate stomach.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been very successful in curing weakness in women. A recent case is that of Mrs. J. R. Campbell, of No. 29 Union street, Lonsdale, R. I., who says:

"After the birth of my little girl I was in a weak condition for several months. I suffered terribly. My leg was swollen and I was just a skeleton. My stomach was so weak that I could not retain more than a quarter of a teaspoonful of beef tea at a time. I grew weaker and weaker and my life hung in the balance for ten weeks with the doctor trying to bring back some strength.

"My husband at last asked me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for the doctor seemed to have done all he could for me. I started taking the pills after I had been in bed for ten weeks. I began to gain almost immediately and after a good trial of the pills was able to get up and walk. I recovered my health and strength and praises the pills highly."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the greatest discovery of modern times for suffering women. They are unequalled as a blood builder and therefore as a tonic for the whole system. They have for years been curing anemia, rheumatism, after-effects of the grip and fevers and such nervous diseases as neuralgia, nervous headaches, dizziness, St. Vitus' dance and even partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia.

A booklet of valuable information, entitled "Plain Talks to Women," will be sent free to any woman interested.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

EARLE, "SOUL MATE" BACK; ESTRANGED

MONROE, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Gloomy and defiant, Ferdinand Pinney Earle is back to-day at his castle at Monroe, while his latest soul mate, Miss Georgie Buell Dunn of Boston, under another name, is with a woman friend sharing a studio in the Metropolitan Opera House Building in New York city.

The exact time of Earle's arrival from Europe, whither he went with Miss Dunn, July 25, is not known. If he did not return on the same ship with her he came only a few hours behind.

The taciturnity of the affinity artist shows light again, but therefore have gone away. Miss Dunn is said to have become disgusted with life in Paris and to have abruptly left him and his petty Chihuahua pet, he now is cared for. Apparently but the people of Monroe are not elated over his return.

He is said to pace the terraces and enclosure grounds on the estate and ignoring all ringings of the door bell. To-day businessmen tongues are wagging and threats are being made of what will be done to the artist if he ventures to get out where the public can see him.

Earle is planning a claim suits to which all the residents of Monroe and the neighboring countryside have been invited. Early hopes to make his peace with his neighbors, but they talk of tar and feathers.

'CURLEY SLINGS MUD AND USES A SANDBAG!' GRADY'S CRY ON STUMP

With Rosbury already ringing with campaign oratory, there was a promise of mudsling to it in the two challenges for joint debates issued last night at an open-air rally at the corner of Bine Hill and Mt. Pleasant avenues. Former Representative James J. Conboy challenged both Brennan and Daly, the Curley candidates for the House, to meet him in verbal battle, Conboy to pay all the bills. On the same platform a similar defiance was hurled at Tim Connolly by Teddy Glynn, who promised to make Connolly look like a zero mark with the ring removed.

Former Representative William P. Grady declared that Alderman Curley never made a success of any business. His success as a politician was due, he said, to his mudslinging proclivities.

"Never," said Grady, "was the district so turned against him as now. He's fighting for his political career. Smiling Jim Donovan has got his goat, and his finish is near.

"The people of Ward 17 are tired of Curley's sandbagging politics."

James J. Conboy said of Curley: He's afraid to put up a decent candidate for the House of Representatives. His two candidates are dummies. As I am a candidate for the House I here and now defy Brennan and Daly, Curley's candidates, to meet me in joint debate in any hall in the district. I will pay all the necessary expenses."

Tim Connolly, candidate for the House, said that the handwriting was on the wall for all Tammanyites. "It's best to be a man and not a serf," said Oakham.

Challenge to Connolly.

"I'll stand up in my shoes if I am one of your representatives in the next General Court and will not vote for a bill that will allow Marks Argeel, Curley's business partner, to get some railroad ties, spikes and other junk."

"If Tim Connolly wants to meet me and discuss from both platforms I'm ready for my butcher store," said "Teddy" Glynn, the popular speaker. "I will afford him an opportunity to meet me in debate either in any hall or large field in Boston. He says I'm an ignorant. It's really laughable. Desperado Curley has got him buffaloed, but I'll make him look like a zero mark with the ring removed if I ever meet him on a good platform."

Joint Debate Promised.

There were several members of the inner circle of the Tammany Hall present at the rally, and when it was announced that some startling disclosures would be made to-night by Senator Doyle's supporters pertaining to a certain undertaking wagon that was got by a trip to New Bedford for a certain man's vote on a bill which came before the Committee on Cities, they (Tammanyites) promised to be out in force and meet the facts and issues in a joint debate. The rallies, according to the speakers, would be held in various parts of the ward. The opening one will be at the corner of Shirley street and George street.

CAPTAIN REPORTS LOSS OF TWO MEN

GLOUCESTER, Sept. 17.—The schooner Coronet, Captain Horace Wilson, arrived here from a voyage to Quero after an absence of six weeks. FIND BODY OF UNKNOWN MAN IN FROG POND

The body of a man, unidentified, was found at 6.50 a. m. to-day in the Frog Pond in Boston Common.

Policemen Balik and Capstick of Station 1 made the discovery as they were walking through the Common. His body was lying face down, as though he had been overcome and had fallen in.

The body was just submerged, as the water was but more than eighteen inches in depth. The man was about thirty years of age, weighed about 125 pounds, was five feet five inches in height. The body was clad in a shabby, well-worn suit, a striped shirt, black socks with red rubber soles. Medical Examiner Magrath was notified. The body was taken from the water and placed at the side of the pond and covered with canvas. Large crowds soon came and many guessed as to who had met the fate he did until it was taken to the morgue.

BOSTON OPERA TICKETS.

All records for the sale of season seats were broken. There is still some good seats to be had. Several new names were also added to the stockholders' list during the day.

STRIKERS FLY FLAG; RETURN TO THE MILLS

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 17.—After a night of terror and bloodshed, 3,500 American workmen, all armed, marched back into the mill yards of the plant of the Pressed Steel Car Works to-day.

The American were led by a man carrying an American flag, and his followers asserted that if one stone was thrown at that flag or any attempt made to stone those who are in line they would kill every foreigner in town.

Those in the foreign element replied indirectly that they would shoot the flag full of holes if the Americans tried to hide behind it while going to the mills.

One hundred and fifty Italian boys went on strike to-day, alleging that they had been told by their foremen they would receive but 14 cents an hour instead of the 15 they had been receiving before the grist strike. Chairman Wise of the strikers' executive committee stated that the boys' grievances could be satisfactorily adjusted.

It is estimated that sixty persons were injured in the fights between Americans and foreign elements.

Sheriff Gumbert has issued an order closing all saloons. Street cars were stoned and passengers injured until the company refused to continue to operate cars.

Four thousand strike sympathizers attacked John Hood and Robert Terry, American workmen, who were knocked down and badly beaten when they appeared. Terry, the latter's companion, saved them from their assailants, who were crying "Kill the American dogs."

Then about 400 Americans formed a compact mass and beat their foes and left with clubs and stones. The several thousand foreigners fled for places of shelter.

"More trouble is caused by you women than any other one thing. You congregate in the saloons and cause trouble. You should be at your homes doing your work." was the rebuke administered by Mayor Lash of Newcastle to-day to a woman he had fined for participation in a strike riot.

A despatch from Youngstown, O., says that machinists at the plants of the Republic Iron and Steel Company are on a strike for an increase in wages of two cents an hour and time and a half for overtime. The machinists of the Youngstown Sheet Iron and Tube Company will probably make a similar demand.

SHILOH LEADER ON SECRET TRIP

Much secrecy is attached to the latest project of the Rev. Frank W. Sandford, leader of the Holy Ghost and Us sect, who is reported from Shiloh to-day as on his way to Boston to negotiate for the purchase of a deserted South American sugar plantation, discovered while on his three years' cruise around the world.

The boat branch of the society at No. 547 Massachusetts avenue has received word of the quarter's coming, and refuses to discuss his plans.

Pedro Mackey of Alameda, the Portuguese Coronet whom Sandford is reported on his way to meet, has had only the slightest information of the object of the visit. A letter from Commander Peery, Sandford's lieutenant, conveys the impression that the sect wants to purchase or rent a large tract in South America.

ARMY AND NAVY UNION TOTTERING

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—With several resignations already tendered and with many more threatened, delegates from the Army and Navy Union to-day were discussing the storm cloud which threatens to disrupt the organization. A storm meeting was held, during which it was alleged that $1,600 was unaccounted for on the books of the adjutant general. Some of this missing $1,600 belonged to the endowment fund.

HAZED YOUTH WILL HAVE TO FACE INQUIRY

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 17.—Maxwell Harrison, the fourteen-year-old son of Rev. Zechariah Harrison, rector of the Second Free Baptist Church of Edgewood, was not so badly injured as was first reported as a result of the hazing that took place at the opening of the Edgewood High School in Cranston, according to a report made to-day at the Rhode Island Hospital.

The boy was pretty severely bruised, but he will leave the hospital to-morrow and will be back in school Monday. About fifteen boys were hazed by being shut up in a cold air chamber. There were a like number of boys engaged in the hazing. Harrison and five other boys were unable to get out for more than an hour, and were finally released by the hazers.

It was found that young Harrison was injured the worst. He suffered from shortness of the breath and was otherwise bruised. Chief of Police Franc has been investigating, but the boys refuse to talk about the matter.

The school authorities expect to get the facts from Harrison when he gets back to school. Valentine Alley, superintendent of schools, said to-day:

"We have begun an investigation and expect the Harrison boy to tell us the names of the boys who did the hazing. Proceedings will be pursued with the boys guilty of hazing will be debarred after our investigation is concluded."

OPEN HEARING ON TAX PLANS

The question of classifying property for taxation purposes was discussed at the State House to-day by the commission created by the 1909 Legislature. The commission consists of former Governor Bates, Tax Commissioner Treffry and Bank Commissioner Chenn. It is expected to report to the next General Court whether or not the Constitution ought to be amended for property classification purposes.

John C. Cobb, chairman of the taxation committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, said that at a later hearing he would present Professor Charles J. Bullock of Harvard and several members of the Chamber of Commerce who favored such an amendment.

Former Representative Robert Luce of Somerville, chairman of the taxation committee of the Massachusetts Board of Trade, also favored the plan. The next hearing will be on October 21.

DEWEY COMMAND UP TO PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—No official information has yet been received by the Navy Department that the citizens of New York have petitioned the President to place Admiral Dewey in command of the United States naval vessels at the Hudson-Fulton celebration. It was said at the department to-day that it rests entirely with the President to order Dewey to command the ships at the parade. It reports that English and German admirals will be present, but will outrank the command ing United States naval officers does not impress naval officers here. It being a common occurrence, as in the navies of England and Germany there are admirals and vice-admirals while there are corresponding ranks in the navy of the United States.

HIRE SIX HATCHET MEN IN TONG WAR

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Six of the most daring highbinders in America have been engaged by the Hip Sing Tong to participate in the war of secret societies which has become so fierce in Doyers street, the Chinese quarter. The hatchet men were engaged in San Francisco and are due in New York to-night.

VICTORIA PREMIER DEAD.

MELBOURNE, Sept. 17.—Thomas Bent, Premier of Victoria, is dead. He was an Australian by birth and had been premier, treasurer and minister of railroads of Victoria.

POLICE GUARD ASQUITH FROM SUFFRAGETTES

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., Sept. 17.—With fortifications erected in the streets, the skylights of the Town Hall protected with tarpaulins and a cordon of 1,000 police stretched around the building, Premier Asquith will make a speech here tonight. Free from interference from suffragettes.

Premier Asquith's speech is one of importance to all Englishmen, for he will answer the attack made by Lord Rosebery upon the new budget. He told parliamentary stone upon his demands to the House of Lords that the budget be quashed in such a way that no suffragette would be able to come within a stone's throw of it.

The suffragettes were busy all day laying plans for a grand assault upon the barriers. They will try to get past the police despite the protection, and a great battle is planned. They published to-night to the roofs of adjoining structures and toss bricks through the skylights of the hall, but this will be prevented by the coverings. All the adjoining buildings will be guarded. A strong guard will accompany the carriage of the premier to the hall.

ROOSEVELT SLAYS BULL ELEPHANT

NAIROBI, British East Africa, Sept. 17. News has come in here that Theodore Roosevelt, who has been hunting in the Meru district, has killed a bull elephant with good tusks.

Kermit Roosevelt has been hunting independently at Guasso Nyiro, and has five lions and three buffaloes. He has now started out elephant hunting.

Mr. Roosevelt will move on to Guasso Nyiro to join his son as soon as the skin of the bull elephant has been preserved. E. J. Cunningham, the general manager of the expedition, and Edmund Heller, one of the naturalists, are at present engaged on this work.

Mr. Roosevelt declares that he has had "capital fun," and that all the members of the party are well.

ITCHING SCALY PIMPLY HUMOR

On Both His Legs—Scratched Until It Bled—Lasted Nearly Two Years in Spite of Doctor's Prescription and Neighbors' Advice.

EASY, ECONOMICAL CURE BY 2 SETS OF CUTICURA

"Three years ago small pimples appeared on both of my lower limbs. I scratched them until the blood would flow as from a wound. The itching would be more severe towards evening and bed time. I went to one of the best doctors in my vicinity and he gave me a prescription. This would stop the itching for a day or so but afterwards it would be still worse. After using several dollars' worth of this salve I tried several other remedies but to no avail. The neighbors advised using sulphur and lard but it was all fruitless.

"A few months afterwards I saw an advertisement in a newspaper of the Cuticura Remedies. I at once sent off for some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Resolvent Pills, but thinking they would be no better than the other remedies. But to my surprise after the first order was used the scales disappeared and the itching ceased and after using another order of the Cuticura Remedies I was completely cured, after suffering for nearly two years. I shall be glad to write to any one who may be interested in my cure. Carl Haldeman, Marshall, Wis., October 25, 1908."

Skin Purity The constant use of Cuticura Soap, assisted when necessary by Cuticura Ointment, not only preserves, purifies and beautifies the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but prevents clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, inflammation, irritation, redness and roughness, and other unwholesome conditions. Guaranteed absolutely pure.

Cuticura Soap (25c.), Cuticura Ointment (50c.), Cuticura Resolvent (50c.), are in the form of Cuticura Chocolate Coated Pills, per vial of 60) are sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., 135 Columbus Ave., Boston, Mass.

32-page Cuticura Book, mailed free, as authoritative treatment and cure of skin & scalp diseases.

NO DANGER OF PELLAGRA SPREAD HERE

According to the Boston Board of Health, the people of New England have little fear the scare of the dread pellagra, which is causing terror in the South, and which is a comparatively new disease in the United States.

Boston had one victim of pellagra eight years ago. Twenty-five years ago another case was recorded in this city. Last month a woman died at the Worcester Hospital from pellagra. These, as far as known, include all the cases recorded in New England, and that leads scientists to conclude that pellagra will probably never get a footheld in the colder northern climate as it has in the South.

According to scientific observations, pellagra is caused by poor Indian corn or an infected cereal. Observations show that the disease was unknown in France and Italy, where it is now especially prevalent, until the introduction of maize or Indian corn. It is confined in the former chiefly to those countries, as well as in the United States.

Pellagra is a skin disease, which later affects the spine. The next stage is insanity, and when this develops it is practically impossible to check its progress.

The reason ascribed to its prevalence in the South is the larger quantity of corn consumed by the poorer people there than in the North, the principal breadstuffs being almost entirely made from this grain.

The marked increase of pellagra has led Surgeon General Wyman of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service to publish a weekly bulletin, which will be sent to all the State Boards of Health, and which will deal exclusively with the developments of the disease.

MODERN MONSTER IN REALTAYE—The Sunday American will tell the real story of the director of the recent Barcelona outrages.

POLICE CHIEF AFTER RIOTOUS SCHOOLBOYS

Riotous conduct by boys returning from Somerville High School football practice has resulted in wholesale complaints to the police and special orders from Chief Kendall that these actions must be stopped. It is declared by residents of Wallace street, which leads from one end of the Broadway athletic field, that a gang of 100 or more boys returning from practice trampled over flower beds, stripped fruit trees, insulted women and girls and even pushed remonstrating pedestrians into the street.

It is not specifically stated that the rioters were pupils at Somerville High School. The Wallace street residents say that they may have been grammar school boys or have been spectators from Cambridge and other adjoining cities who came over to Broadway athletic field to watch the team practice.

The Somerville School board is investigating the matter. If the lawless conduct does not cease the High School football eleven may be abolished.

When the throng of boys yesterday swept out of the field on to Wallace street, as though by pre-arrangement, they walked two by two, kicked up the turf and devastated fruit trees.

Men and women residents came out and talked to the boys vigorously. Some of the men used stronger measures. When the complaints began to come into Chief Kendall last night some were told that boys had pushed Wallace street men off from the sidewalks into the gutter and sworn at and used vile language to women and girls and had acted more like thorough going hoodlums than like decent American lads.

SALARY ROW IS BREWING IN CUSTOM HOUSE

That a hearing will soon be held to investigate certain charges, difficulties and alleged violations of a Presidential order at the Boston Custom House which prohibits government officials from being engaged in any movement to influence legislation in Congress for increase in pay, except through the heads of departments, is the opinion of men high up in the local service.

Trouble has been brewing at the Custom House for nearly four days, when a movement was set on foot by the customs inspectors to have their pay increased as the New York inspectors had done, from $4 to $5 a day.

At that time it was a well-known fact in custom house circles that an organization of certain customs inspectors had been formed and that the men were actively engaged in trying to get their salaries raised.

A bill was passed by the last Congress giving authority to the Secretary of the Treasury to increase the pay from $4 to $5 or $6 a day at such ports as he may designate. Secretary MacVeagh has not yet acted upon this. First Deputy Surveyor of the Port J. Henry Liberty, who is acting during the absence of Surveyor Jeremiah Connerty, was loathe to discuss the state of affairs today, although he acknowledged the existence of the movement. Custom house officers estimate that if Secretary MacVeagh should exercise the authority which Congress has given him, the salaries of customs inspectors all over the country would be increased to more than $6,000 a day.

RALLY TO-NIGHT FOR CALLAHAN

At a rally to-night in the Old Franklin Schoolhouse, Dover and Washington streets, for the re-election of Representative Timothy F. Callahan, the speakers will be Bartholomew A. Brickley, Michael J. Reddy, Thomas F. Riley and Mr. Callahan. Candidate John F. Sheehan held a rally in the schoolhouse last night. He attacked Callahan's record. House candidates Daniel L. Sullivan, Joseph Heffernan and Joseph Leonard, Senator James H. Doyle and William F. Murray, candidate for the Governor's Council, were the other speakers. Alderman Curley, Tim Connolly and Senate candidate Jere Good invaded Ward 9 for an open-air rally at Dover street and Shawmut avenue last night.

Alderman Curley spoke in Ward 9, Doyle's friends held an open-air rally at Dudley street and Mount Pleasant avenue, two blocks from the Tammany Club headquarters.

LEANDER M. HANNUM OF CAMBRIDGE DEAD

Former Senator Leander Moody Hannum, one of the most prominent citizens of Cambridge, died early to-day at his home, No. 353 Harvard street, Cambridgeport, aged seventy-two. Death was due to a stroke. He was born in Northampton, went to California at the age of seventeen, worked in the gold mines two years, and turned East, completed his education and settled in Cambridge. He made considerable money in the real estate business. He became an influential Republican. His offices were Common Council, 1873; Board of Aldermen, 1874-75, Representative, 1875-76; Senator, 1881-82, 1907-08. He was Special Commissioner for Middlesex county, Chairman of the Cambridge Republican City Committee and a member of the Water Board for twelve years. He was a Mason and a member of many clubs and other organizations. He was a widower.

LACK OF ACTORS HURTS MANAGERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—"Good actors are harder to find than molders in a hen's mouth," is the plaint from Mr. Charles Frohman to-day, and several other theatrical actors said "Amen." It is said to be almost impossible to organize an important theatrical company at present, as there are very few good actors or actresses out of employment. That is a very happy solution for the players, but not serious one for the poor managers.

"Never before in the history of the American stage," said Mr. Frohman, "has there been a time when managers have had to have been under contract so early in a season as now. It is, therefore, comparatively easy to assemble a company for a new production."

WIFE NOT INVITED, GOVERNOR DECLINES

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17.—Because he dislikes to be separated from his wife and she from him, Governor T. R. Marshall of Indiana has declined the invitation of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterway Association to be a member of the Governors' boat party to New Orleans. No arrangements have been made for Governors' wives on the trip. Governor Marshall said in his letter to W. K. Kavanaugh: "As Mrs. Marshall endured the ardors and toils of a campaign in order to be with me, and I am not convinced that my presence is necessary to the public good on the trip, I must respectfully but gratefully decline your invitation."

CANNON TO SPEAK AT CHICAGO FEAST

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Bulls and bears from the wheat pit of Board of Trade will gather in Chicago to-day and to-morrow as the guests of the Chicago Board of Trade. A thousand visitors are expected to attend the convention. A big delegation from St. Louis, headed by Jesse Spalding, marched to the Great Northern Hotel, where they were greeted by the Chicago committee. The principal event of the convention will be the banquet in the Auditorium Hotel to-night, where "Uncle Joe" Cannon will be the principal orator.

PINCHOT FIGHT TO GO INTO CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—That the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy will be injected in Congress is expected to be released in this city. It is predicted that President Taft's letter to Secretary Ballinger in which announcement is made that Mr. Ballinger is exonerated in every particular in his fight with the forest service officials will add fuel to the flames, and results in the introduction of resolutions of inquiry that may force Congress to take cognizance of the matter.

STEEL PRICES ADVANCE.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 17.—The price of Bessemer pig iron is steadily mounting, and offers have been made at $17.50, which restores the price to about the figure before the recent financial depression.

PEARY NOW WEAKENING IN HIS ATTACKS UPON HIS POLAR RIVAL

Commander Admits It Possible That the Doctor Was Really at the Pole, Unknown to Him.

BATTLE HARBOR, Labrador, Sept. 17.—Commander Peary made his first concession to Dr. Cook today when he declared that while it was possible for Cook to reach the North Pole by any of the numerous routes, and for Peary not to encounter him, though in the polar regions at the time, nevertheless he found no trace of Cook and did not believe that he had been there.

Peary also doubted the story that he would lead an American South polar dash next February, although he reiterated his previous statement that he would take part in planning the expedition.

The first tangible suggestion from Peary as to a final settlement of the Cook-Peary controversy was made by the Commander when he suggested that both he and Dr. Cook submit all their data and observations before the International Polar Commission, allowing that body to act as judge and jury.

Commander Peary made the following statement to the American News service correspondent:

"I will make a full statement, refuting Dr. Cook when he gives details before any reputable scientific body. I am positive that Dr. Cook did not reach the North Pole. I have the proof.

"I saw no signs of Dr. Cook at or near the North Pole. It is quite possible for any explorer to remain within sight of the pole and make full astronomical observations regarding the North Pole, and Admiral Melville and Admiral Sir John Nares support my belief. I would be afraid to let the International Polar Commission judge the controversy, but I will not discuss fake stories relating to the dispute.

"I will plan an expedition for objection to the South Pole, but will not go personally. It is now possible to reach the North Pole two seasons out of three, as the new sledge has revolutionized exploration.

"I shall leave for Sydney on Saturday. I am still recuperating in Battle Harbor."

PEARY WON'T SAY IF ANY ONE SAW HIM DEPOSIT RECORDS

BATTLE HARBOR, Labrador, Sept. 17.—Commander Robert E. Peary today refused to answer a direct question as to whether any person saw him deposit his records at the North Pole.

Although the navigator said that a copy of his records and observations was wrapped in a piece of an American silk flag and deposited in an ice cavity at the Pole yet, when pressed for an answer as to whether any one witnessed his act Commander Peary refused to make any comment.

Commander Peary dwelt at length upon the observations taken at the Pole, and the movements of Harry Whitney, the New Haven gentleman who has been described as the bearer of records substantiating Dr. Cook's claim to the Pole discovery.

We took five observations prior to reaching the Pole," Commander Peary said. "Two of these were made and worked out by the late Professor Ross G. Marvin, who prepared duplicate records in each case, and duly signed the duplicate certificates. To guard against accident I took one set of these papers and Professor Marvin took the other. When at a distance of 125 miles from the Pole the third observation was made by Captain Bartlett, who also signed the records and certificates in duplicate, he retaining one set and I the other. The fourth and fifth observations were made by myself, the last being taken five miles from the Pole.

"Was there more than one observation taken at the Pole, and to whom?" the express paper was asked.

"There were several observations," replied, "and I took them all myself. They all agreed. You must understand that the Pole is a theoretical point, without length, breadth or thickness. Its actual location depends on the accuracy of the instruments employed and the conditions under which the observations are taken."

Continuing, Peary said that Dr. Cook was expected by the world to submit to an impartial tribunal, or board of arbitration, a revised and authentic signed statement of his alleged discovery of the Pole. Dr. Cook soon would reach the United States, Commander Peary said, and he was glad in the prospect of the matter being submitted for consideration at an early date. It should be done inside of a couple of weeks, and when it was done, the commander declared, he was prepared to turn over to the board of arbitrators, to the public, and to scientific bodies, an array of testimony which would disprove Dr. Cook's claims for all time.

"WHITNEY KNOWS," IS COOK'S MESSAGE

(Dr. Cook's wireless message to American.)

On Board S.S. Oscar II., by wireless, via Marshfield, Ireland, Sept. 17.

Editor, Boston American:

Whitney and our belongings are on the steamer Jeanie. Whitney knows as to the form of my success (that Cook reached the North Pole) but the Peary people were only informed that we had been very far north. COOK.

PEARY IS DUE AT SYDNEY ON SUNDAY, ACCORDING TO WIFE

By EVELYN BRIGGS BALDWIN,

Who has participated in four voyages to the Arctic.

SYDNEY, N. S., Sept. 16.—Mrs. Robert E. Peary stated today that from a cablegram which she had just received from Commander Peary she expects her husband to arrive at Sydney Sunday.

The Dominion Government steamer Tyrian, which left Sydney Tuesday night with forty newspaper correspondents and about one hundred guests of D. D. Mackenzie, member of Parliament, arrived at Battle Harbor, Labrador, last night. Owing to the fact that the Tyrian was provided with but seven sleeping bunks for passengers, it is surmised that the party aboard must have experienced considerable discomfort during the voyage to Battle Harbor.

Although sentiment generally favors Peary, there are numerous upholders of Cook in this city. The fact that both explorers started North from Sydney intensifies the interest in them.

In a statement by Joseph Macdonald, merchant, of North Sydney, who knows both Dr. Cook and John R. Bradley, he says that when Mr. Bradley arrived at North Sydney on his schooner, the John R. Bradley, he bore a letter of introduction from Mr. MacDonald's brother in New York. Mr. MacDonald thereupon introduced Mr. Bradley to the bankers at North Sydney, and otherwise rendered both Bradley and Cook assistance during their stay in North Sydney. Mr. Bradley also called to see Mr. MacDonald after he came back from the North.

Neither Bradley nor Cook would say anything in regard to a North Pole trip, even when Mr. MacDonald remarked upon the great quantity of provisions and equipment taken aboard the schooner, which suggested a long stay in the Arctic regions. To Mr. MacDonald's inquiry as evasive reply was made, but he was given to understand that Mr. Cook was going on a scientific expedition for a book on Arctic life, while Mr. Bradley was on a sporting trip, to hunt musk ox, walrus, polar bear and other game of the Far North.

Upon his return to North Sydney that autumn, Mr. Bradley presented to Mr. MacDonald that the real object of the venture was a dash for the North Pole, and that preparations for it had been made with great secrecy.

Mr. MacDonald further states that Cook wanted to get North as soon as possible in order to get ahead of Commander Peary, who was then preparing to go upon his expedition, and so obtain the pick of the Eskimos.

POLAR COMMISSION CABLES PEARY ITS CONGRATULATIONS

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Peary has been indorsed to the full extent by scientific experts in the world, according to Herbert L. Bridgman, secretary of the Peary Arctic Club.

Among many cablegrams which Mr. Bridgman found when he reached his home in Brooklyn from Sydney was the following sent from Tcele, a suburb of Brussels, Belgium:

(Signed) CAGNI.
NORDENSKIOLD.
LE COINTE.

Tcele suburb is the seat of Belgian Observatory, of which M. Le Cointe is the director. Captain Umberto Cagni, who was the Italian leader of the Duke of Abruzzi's Polar expedition, is president of the International Polar Commission. Dr. Otton Nordenskiold is its vice-president, and has led a Swedish expedition into the Antarctic, while M. Le Cointe is his secretary.

Dr. Cook, while at Copenhagen, received telegrams of congratulation from Brussels and Italy. Invitations to lecture there, Dr. Bridgman was insistent that none of them came officially from the International Polar Commission, and that the message made public today was the first scientific recognition of the discovery of the Pole yet accorded to either claimant by the world-wide body of recognized authorities on the subject.

POLE

DR. COOK DECLARES WHITNEY WILL PROVE HIS CASE

Coincident with the arrival of a wireless dispatch from Dr. Cook, on board the Oscar II., to-day, saying that Whitney knows he reached the Pole, came a dispatch from St. John's, N. F., stating that there was a strong possibility that Harry Whitney had arrived at Battle Harbor, Labrador, on the Jeanie.

The St. John's dispatch told of the receipt of information from Indian Harbor, Labrador, of the wreck of the whaling ship Stanley of Dundee in Davis Straits on September 18, 1906, the crew being saved. The dispatch continued:

This message is presumed here to mean that the Canadian Government cruiser Arctic, Captain Bernier, or the steamer Jeanie, Captain Samuel Bartlett, has arrived at Battle Harbor, as otherwise there is no reasonable way to account for the receipt of this information on the Labrador coast.

Captain Bernier is the Canadian Arctic explorer who has been so long in the far north that fears were expressed that he had perished. It is now the news of the wreck of the Snowdrop was brought in by the Jeanie, the claims of Dr. Cook with regard to his discovery of the Pole should be substantiated by Whitney at once.

The Snowdrop left Dundee in the summer of 1906. In December a bottle containing a statement that she was sinking, with all hands in a perilous state, and the owners proposed to send another ship to search the Baffin Land coast. To-day's dispatch from Indian Harbor seems like a message from the dead, for it is signed "Ritchie" and a man of that name was among the crew.

COOK IS CHARGED WITH "GRABBING OFF" THE PRIZE

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Herbert L. Bridgman, secretary of the Peary Arctic Club, who hurried home from Sydney, where he had gone to meet Commander Peary, was still full of enthusiasm to-day and about the active work of planning a rival reception for the commander, offsetting the elaborate program under way by the Arctic Club for the welcome of Dr. Cook.

"Cook's action in cloaking his start for the North Pole in secrecy for months," said Secretary Bridgman to-day. "He know Peary spent nearly twenty years in his polar investigations and was perfecting his plans for reaching the Pole on this very trip. Cook took advantage of all Peary's discoveries—routes, fiords and necessary information. That has incensed me more than anything else is the public misunderstanding of the whole affair. Why could Cook not have waited for Peary to complete his effort? Then failing, Cook could have started."

An invitation has been sent to Mayor McClellan asking him to represent the city at the Cook banquet at the Waldorf-Astoria. Six hundred invitations have already been sent out for the banquet and thousands of requests for tickets are pouring in from every section of the country. Rear Admiral Schley, president of the Arctic Club, and Dr. A. D. Stokes, chairman of the executive committee, are actively in charge of the arrangements.

PRIVATE CAR FOR PEARY FAMILY ON TRIP TO BOSTON

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 17.—Arrangements have been made with the Intercolonial Railroad for a private car with sleeping accommodations for Commander Peary and his family from Sydney. The car, according to to-day's arrangements, will be attached to the regular express leaving next Tuesday for Boston.

PIRATE BRUHM AND COMPANION ARE INDICTED

District Attorney Higgins to-day announced that six correct indictments had been returned by the September session of the Middlesex County grand jury against Clyde H. Bruhm, former University of Maine student and Salem broker, who made a sensational escape from the Boston Tombs on August 24 and created a reign of terror on the North Shore. Harry V. Windgate, his partner, has also been indicted and there are four other indictments against Bruhm alone.

All these indictments charge breaking and entering and receiving stolen goods. The six against the two men are from Cambridge for breaks into the house of Thomas B. Gannett of July 19, the house of Frederick W. Tilton on July 21 and the house of Charlotte Jones on August 23.

The four against Bruhm alone are for breaks in the alleged homes of Charles H. Moss on July 31 and of L. E. Stroud on August 17.

Bruhm faces four other secret indictments which were returned against him in Dedham on September 14. The different breaks all told, the police charge, netted Bruhm and his companion jewelry and valuables to the amount of several thousands of dollars, most of which was found in the North Shore pirate's home in South Boston.

Bruhm added to his sensational career when he escaped from Sergeant Morse and Inspector Shields last month after he had been arrested and placed in the city prison. He went to Salem and with Witz gale bounded their fast sailing yacht, Savage, and haunted the North Shore, later deserting same at Kittery, Me., and eluding the Maine police in a clever manner.

Although police officials of all of the North Shore towns and cities have been hard at work ever since, Bruhm and his companion so far managed to keep clear of arrest.

BRIDGE THREATENED BY WASTE FIRE

A pile of waste that dropped from a passing freight car while crossing the Mystic drawbridge, near the East Somerville station of the Boston & Maine railroad, caught fire from the spark of a locomotive and blazed up so briskly for a few minutes that it was thought the drawbridge would go. The blaze was extinguished without any damage to the bridge, and no delay was caused to the bridge.

MISS MAGRANE IS BURIED IN LYNN

LYNN, Sept. 17.—The funeral of Miss Katherine Magrane, sister of P. B. Magrane, took place to-day. There was a prayer service at the house, No. 21 Church street, and at nine o'clock requiem high mass was celebrated in St. Mary's Church by Right Rev. Monsignor A. J. Peeling. Interment was at St. Mary's cemetery. Miss Magrane was born in Ireland, fifty-four years ago.

LABOR PLANS EXHIBIT AT "1915" FAIR

An industrial and educational exhibit by the numerous trade unions of Boston at the Boston 1915 exposition in November is under consideration. If finally decided on, it will be the first time organized labor in this city has been given an opportunity, as a whole, to get in touch with the general public at any of the great expositions or fairs held in Boston.

The invitation for the unions to take part in the exposition was sent to the leading labor men of this city by M. C. Leckner, chairman of the 1915 labor advisory committee. It is purposed to give the unions ample space to demonstrate the value of organization among wageworkers. They also may be given one of the lecture nights, and in that case would have the naming of their own speaker, who could explain more thoroughly the principles of trade unionism and the necessity of organization among workingmen.

It is not intended at this time to have working exhibits, this being almost impossible, owing to space limitations at the old Art Museum, where the 1915 exposition is to be held, but a full line of union labels, tables showing the chain of union benefits—fraternal and trade—the growth of unionism in Boston, with a thorough illustration of the trade union movement as a whole, is proposed. The Central Labor Union of Boston and its family also is invited to explain the proposed laws labor organizations have been instrumental in having introduced at different sessions of the Legislature, and to show the general public the scope of those measures.

The preliminary meeting of representatives from the trade unions of this city and the Boston 1915 movement already has been held to discuss the question. The question now will be referred to the organizations themselves for a final decision.

Among those who attended this preliminary meeting at Michael J. Murphy, president of the Boston Central Labor Union; Steffen Thomsbinnus, secretary of the C. L. U.; Arthur M. Watson, secretary of the Carpenters' District Council; Thomas P. Curtin, secretary of Typographical Union No. 13; J. W. McDonald, secretary of the Allied Printing Trades Council, and C. K. Mitchell of the Locomotive Engineers' organization. M. C. Leckner, chairman of the 1915 labor advisory committee, represented the Boston 1915 movement, and the meeting took place by arrangement at the City Club rooms.

SHUMAN IN IRELAND TO BUY WOOLENS

Sidney E. Shuman, of the firm of A. Shuman & Co., and buyer of woolens, is now traveling in Ireland, visiting the mills there for the purchase of Irish woolens for another season. A. Shuman & Co., who for many years have imported these goods in large quantities, are leaders, and were pioneers in introducing Irish friezes and tweeds into this market. The climate conditions on the Emerald Isle are peculiarly favorable to the growth of long staple wool, and the sheep need not be housed as in other countries, consequently the wool comes from the back of the Irish sheep, while coarse, is particularly serviceable and has made these goods famous.

MRS. HARRIMAN MUST PAY $1,000,000 TAX TO STATE

Railroad Financier Left All of His $100,000,000 Fortune to Wife Who Aided Him.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The will of Edward H. Harriman, offered for probate at Goshen, N. Y., in document of only ninety-eight words has marked the transfer of one of the largest private fortunes of the age—probably $100,000,000—and makes Mrs. Mary W. Harriman perhaps the richest woman in the world. The financier left everything to his wife, her name being the only one that entered in the short testament of three sentences.

I was the greatest tribute perhaps ever paid by an American man to an American woman. It brings into the foreground of those who have tremendous financial power in this country a woman who has, aroded, rather than courted, the public gaze, whose life has been devoted to her husband and children, yet who, it now appears, was in a wonderfully large measure responsible for the success of the master railroad builder.

Harriman carried out in the terms of his will his views of married life, as stated by him in one of his few public utterances. He said:

"Matrimony is not essentially a business proposition. In fact, it should never be regarded as such. But nevertheless, marriage often plays an important part in the race for what is commonly called success.

"To the young man who would be a success in life I would give these hints:

"When you marry choose a good woman, a co-operative woman, one who will inspire in you the highest ever work it may be incumbent upon you to do.

I truly believe that if wives were to take more interest in their husbands' affairs we would have a happier world."

He married just such a woman.

It was the marriage portion she brought him that gave him his first real start toward the mighty power and the hundred millions. That has been more or less generally known. But it appears now that it was her counsel, her fine judgment in immense intricate problems, that helped him along the tracks of success.

A man who has long enjoyed close friendship with the Harriman family said to the AMERICAN to-day:

"There is no secret behind the Harriman will. For many years it has been Mr. Harriman's wish to get his affairs into such shape as would make his demise of little importance, as far as the completion and maintenance of his projects were concerned.

"Unknown to the public Mrs. Harriman has played a part in every big transaction her husband undertook. Mr. Harriman had great confidence in her judgment, and he held her advice so valuable, that to my knowledge he would often change his plans concerning matters of financial import after consulting her.

Will Continue Work.

"Even before this will was drawn, six years ago, he said that he considered Mrs. Harriman fully capable of managing his affairs, and that to her would be left the work of carrying on his life work.

"When the children become of age they will share equally in the income or be provided for in such other way as their mother thinks proper and just. All understand this is their father's wish and will abide by it. Mrs. Harriman alone knows what her husband's wishes were as to his own relatives and others who might expect to be remembered.

The will was written on a single sheet of ordinary paper by Mr. Harriman himself. It is believed that it was drafted by his lawyer, after consultation, and then copied in Mr. Harriman's own handwriting. Experts say it is a perfect instrument.

It was in every way such a will as might have been made by anyone who wished to leave his small affairs to his wife. Thousands of such wills are filed every year in the New York courts, but very few are wills of poor men. This is the first time in history when one of the large fortunes has passed so simply into other hands.

Only one American fortune approaching this in vastness and importance has ever been left to a woman. That woman is Mrs. Russell Sage. She did not receive absolutely all of her husband's $65,000,000, nor was what she did receive entirely free to her by their father's will. Her fortune is by no means as large as Mrs. Harriman's.

If Mr. Harriman transferred any considerable amount of his wealth just before his death, and it could be shown that he did so to avoid the payment of the inheritance tax by the beneficiaries, the State would have the right to initiate proceedings for the collection of the evaded tax.

Chairman James Tayler of the New York Board of Appraisers says:

"The law recognizes that a man has the right to dispose of his property as he sees fit, but it also recognizes that the State is entitled to a tax on inheritances. If it can be shown that a man has made transfers of his property just before death, in contemplation of his death and for the purpose of evading the inheritance tax, then the State can step in and collect the usual tax on those transfers."

What the Widow Must Pay.

The inheritance tax which Mrs. Harriman must pay is 1 per cent. of the total of her legacy. If the estate amounts to $100,000,000 the State will receive $1,000,000, and if it amounts to $200,000,000 the tax will be $2,000,000.

If the inheritance tax is paid within six months after Mr. Harriman's death Mrs. Harriman will get an allowance of 5 per cent., which would be $50,000 if the tax amounts to $1,000,000 and $100,000 if the tax runs up to $2,000,000.

Mrs. Harriman will have eighteen months in which to pay the inheritance tax, but should it not be paid in that period a penalty of 10 per cent. interest from the date of Mr. Harriman's death would be added to the tax. Because of the large saving that will come by paying the tax within six months it is expected Mrs. Harriman's lawyers will expedite the appraisal of the estate in every possible way.

The affidavit of assets must include an itemized list of everything Mr. Harriman died possessed of, not only parcels of real estate and stocks and bonds, but silverware, jewelry, paintings, statuary, household furniture, books, bric-a-brac, horses, carriages, yachts and automobiles.

Never Changed the Will.

The fact that rM. Harriman drew his remarkable will June 8, 1903, and never saw fit to alter it in any way, although in the last six years he must have added at least $50,000,000 to his fortune, caused much comment downtown.

He signed the will the day before he sailed for Europe, June 9, 1903, on the steamship Kronprinz Wilhelm. With him on that trip were his daughters, the Misses Mary and Carol Harriman, and his eldest son, W. Averill Harriman.

By the terms of Mrs. Harriman he becomes the largest individual shareholder of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific roads, Wells Fargo & Co. and a multitude of smaller companies.

Mrs. Anne Weightman-Penfield	80,000,000
Mrs. Russell Sage	80,000,000

"I don't mind telling you that I have more money than Jay Gould ever had, or would have if he lived a hundred years," says E. H. Harriman's own statement concerning his wealth, made to a representative of the Cosmopolitan Magazine. It is a matter of record that Gould left between $75,000,000 and $80,000,000. It is fully authenticated that Harriman left at least $100,000,000—perhaps $200,000,000.

VESUVIUS RUMBLES; PEASANTS FLEEING

NAPLES, Sept. 17.—Villagers and peasantry living on the slopes of Mount Vesuvius are fleeing, fearful of the renewed activity of the treacherous mountain. Loud rumblings are heard in the bowels of the earth and two new craters have appeared. Black smoke pours forth continuously. The mountain is acting just as it did before the great earthquake last Winter.

50 GUESTS ROUTED BY CHICAGO FIRE

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Fire early today which broke out in the basement of the building occupied by the Grant Hotel, No. 128 Dearborn street, routed fifty guests and caused considerable excitement. The flames were confined for the most part to the basement and a haberdashery store on the ground floor, but the smoke filled the entire building. Miss Genevieve Deforrest, a guest, hurried through the hallways, notifying the guest that the fire was in the basement and that they had plenty of time to dress and leave the building. Her self-possession prevented a panic.

LEE, Sept. 17.—Judge Patrick H. Casey of the Lee Police Court, known as the "Tuxedo Judge of the Berkshires," because he was accustomed to wear a Tuxedo or dinner coat at court sittings, has resigned.

The judge is sixty-six years old and is a native of Ireland.

In February, 1907, he was married in Philadelphia to Louise Emmelie Hoskins. In September of the previous year Miss Hoskins heard the Judge deliver a patriotic address on President McKinley at the Aspinwall Hotel. "Miss Hoskins liked my speech," said the judge afterward, "and after that our affinity for one another seemed to grow."

It was at Judge Casey's Court that Hugh Gurney, second secretary of the British embassy, was fined $10 for overspeeding his automobile in September, 1904, by Associate Justice Phelps. After an international complication, the fine was returned.

Judge Casey was admitted to the bar in Springfield in 1878, after an examination before the full bench of the Supreme Court. The judge practiced in Springfield and Holyoke for eighteen years. He returned to Lee in 1887 because of his health. Before leaving Springfield Judge Casey had a practice of $5,000 a year, and, with his recognized ability as a lawyer, it would have reached $25,000 a year had he remained there, it is said.

When he became justice of the Lee court he gave up his practice and devoted his entire attention to the court duties. He was always a firm believer in the dignity of the court, and on its walls had posted it, significantly reading, "The Temple of Justice shall not be profaned or polluted."

REPUBLIC FOR HUNGARY, SAYS GEN. BARTLETT

General Charles W. Bartlett, who returned home to-day on the Cymric, says that he doesn't know anything about Boston politics, having been away all Summer, but he says that the finest kind of political mass is hatching in Austro-Hungary, where he and Mrs. Bartlett have been putting in most of their time. He looks for a breaking up of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy on the death of the aged Emperor Franz Joseph and the establishment of a Hungarian republic, he says.

"Mrs. Bartlett and I spent most of our three months in Buda Pesth. From there we made a trip to Vienna, which we had visited three times before, but this was our first good chance to see what we wanted to see. Buda Pesth, which is a most interesting city.

"Revolution is seething in Hungary and Bohemia. It is only waiting for the death of Franz Joseph to come to a head. There is now a fine statue of George Washington in Buda Pesth. This statue was presented to me as Hungary's example by over a hundred Hungarian and well-to-do Magyars. I look for the breaking up of Austro-Hungary and the establishment of a Hungarian republic as soon as the old Emperor dies.

"All authenticated history is in a ferment and history is going to be made very soon and in these countries before many years have elapsed."

"Are you going into the campaign this Fall?" he was asked.

"I don't know anything about local politics having been away all Summer," he said.

KING EDWARD'S SUMMER GIRLS —This quaint fad of England's monarch is told in words and pictures perbly illustrated in the Sunday American.

KING VISITS RELATIVES OF MRS. KEPPEL

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Society is expressing a deep, but repressed interest in the news that King Edward, immediately upon his return from Yorkshire, paid a visit to Sir Archibold and Lady Edmondstone, at Dunrath Castle, Stirlingshire, Scotland. Sir Archibald is the brother of Mrs. George Keppel, long a favorite of His Majesty. This is the first time a relative of Mrs. Keppel has been honored by a visit from the King. Sir Archibold is entertaining a large house party to meet his royal guest.

Sir Archibald's first house party is of big success, according to all reports. The king, unusually well and cheerful, is surrounded by old friends, such as Lady Sarah Wilson and Mrs. Greville.

Mrs. Keppel is now parading the news that she is descended from a distinguished family of royal blood in Scotland. She says some remote ancestors of hers married the daughters of King Robert II and King Robert III, of Scotland.

Although she is expanding the family tree, Mrs. Keppel has reduced her physical figure. She looks many years younger than she has ever.

Mrs. Keppel, who has gained much prominence in England through the King's favor, paid a visit to New York in 1905 with her husband, when she was the American representative of Sir Thomas Lipton, who was then at the height of his fame.

MAKE BOSTON WOMAN HEAD OF BIG OPERA

NEW YORK Sept. 17.—A complete reorganization of the managing forces of the Italian Grand Opera Company, which is saving a season of opera at the Academy of Music, has place when Mrs. Alonzo S. Apgood became the managing director of the company.

She, it is believed, is the first woman who has ever undertaken the management of an opera company. It is said that with Mrs. Apgood's ability of money has been furnished into the backing of the company.

"It was the first time," said Mrs. Apgood, "that I have been embarked in anything which might be termed a business enterprise in opera, though. The directors insisted on my taking charge of their affairs and finally I consented to accept. We have been very busy, and haven't had time to change my clothes."

Mrs. Apgood's relations to a prominent Boston publicity man and to a public lecturer and writer, the died on the Riviera a week ago, the bird of paradise of America in congress of musicians, artists and writers, through which many cities of Italy, a plan which is said to have met with the hearty concurrence of the King of Italy.

"I do think that I think," said Mrs. Apgood, which caused me to undertake the second task. I wish that it would have followed my judgment."

A Bracing Tonic After Typhoid

MR. FRANCIS SHEPPARD.

Mr. Francis Sheppard, of Scranton, Pa., says that he was left so weak after an attack of typhoid fever that he could scarcely walk. He took Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey; one bottle put him on his feet. The second bottle gave him his old-time vigor and strength. He recommends it to all who are weak and need something to build them up.

"Having read a great deal about Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, I decided to try it, and cannot praise it too much. During the typhoid epidemic in our city two years ago, I happened to be one of the victims (one of the lucky victims, thank God). It left me in such a weak condition that I was scarcely able to walk. Thanks to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, after taking one bottle of it I was able to go to my work. After the second bottle I can say I am entirely well. I think there is nothing equal to it, and would recommend it to any one who is run down with fever or any other disease. Although I do not drink liquor in any form, I do recommend Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as per directions." Francis Sheppard, Scranton, Pa.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

as a tonic and stimulant when convalescing after fever is the greatest strength-giver known to science. It destroys disease germs, and by its building and healing properties restores tissues in a gradual, healthy, natural manner. It is a wonderful specific in the treatment and cure of consumption, pneumonia, grippe, bronchitis, coughs, colds, malaria, low fevers, stomach troubles and all wasting, weakened diseased conditions.

If in need of advice, write Medical Department, The Duffy Malt Whiskey Company, Rochester, New York, stating your case fully. Our doctors will send you advice free, together with a handsome illustrated medical booklet containing some of the many gratifying letters received from men and women in all walks of life, both old and young, who have been cured and benefited by the use of this great medicine. It is sold everywhere by druggists, grocers and dealers, or shipped direct for $1.00 per bottle.

RED SOX GAME IS OFF; PLAY TWO TO-MORROW

ATHLETICS ARE RUSHING FOR LEAD

Philadelphia is the centre of interest in the baseball world to-day, where the Athletics and Tigers are battling for the lead in the American League race.

The Tigers hold the position three games ahead of the Athletics, and the two teams have just that number to play before they separate. If the Athletics can win the majority of the series it's a safe bet that the other Eastern teams will pull the Tigers off their perch and allow the Quakers to win the pennant.

The Athletics got first blood by winning the opening contest yesterday, and the victory gave them greater prestige than ever. The change in the result of to-day's contest will be as follows:

	Per cent. Wins	Loses
If Detroit	.650	.642
If Philadelphia	.628	.620

Rain knocked out the scheduled game between the Red Sox and White Sox to-day. They will be a double-header to-morrow, starting at 1.30 o'clock.

If the Windy City team was a few points nearer the locals in the percentage column, they might be a dangerous crowd to fool with but fortunately the gap between third and fourth places is wide enough to allow a few defeats for the Red Sox to come along without ousting them from their hard earned berth.

No Chance for Pennant.

The fact that Manager Lake is trying out some of his new material is conclusive proof that all chance for the second place has gone by, and that now he is taking the opportunity to size up some of the new minor league recruits playing against the big teams.

The fans who have been up to see the team play every game this season believe that the team should finish in second place, and being only five games behind, there is no particular reason why it shouldn't play to the limit right up to the last ball.

While the present series is on between the Athletics and the Tigers there is the chance for the Red Sox to get a hump on themselves.

The Western teams are trying to make the best showing possible on their last whirl around this end of the circuit, and the native clubs are certain to get all the bother they want, and there is plenty coming to the Red Sox when the other Western candidates come along.

There is going to be one spot in which the Red Sox will figure in this pennant race and that will come at the very tail end of the season, when Detroit comes here. The situation may be then that the Athletics will need some help in the way of knocking down the Tigers, in order to win the flag. Then the local team may be able to come to the rescue and check the Jennings gang from doing it again.

INDIANS LOOK WEAK ON THE GRIDIRON

CARLISLE, Penn., Sept. 17.—The chances of the Carlisle Indians for having a strong team this year, or at least one that will compare favorably with the organizations of the last few seasons, are less than even the school officials had reason to anticipate earlier in the practice season.

From present appearances the make-up of the eleven for 1909 will not include a single aborigine who played on the regular eleven last year. Thorpe, it is thought, may return to school, but Coach Warner does not know his plans definitely.

O'NEIL SURE 2:10ER.

O'Neil, the three-year-old son of Walnut Hall (2.08¼), from the dam of Ozanam (2.07), in Tommy Murphy's stable, will surely beat 2.10 if no accident befalls him. He went in that notch at Readville.

Peter Butts (2:11¼), one of the handicap winners at Readville, was purchased after his race by C. K. G. Billings for use as a saddle horse, the price paid being $2,500.

KETCHEL OFF TO TRAIN FOR MR. JOHNSON

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Stanley Ketchel, the middleweight champion, and Sam Langford, the negro fighter, probably never will meet in the ring. Following the calling off of to-night's projected bout, in consequence of the interference of the authorities, Ketchel received a telegram directing him to proceed at once to the Pacific Coast to prepare for his fight with Jack Johnson on October 21. He will start to-night, and there is no possibility of his meeting Langford at any other time or place.

Wednesday, Governor Hughes sent the following telegram to District-Attorney Jerome:

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 15, 1909.
To the District Attorney of New York County:

In view of the reports made to him, Governor Hughes directs me to request you to take proper steps to enforce within the County of New York, Section 1710 of the penal law with regard to prize fighting. It is desired that the authorities should cooperate to compel obedience to the law and to secure the apprehension and conviction of people violating it.

(Signed) ROBERT H. FULLER,
Secretary of the Governor.

Commissioner Bodine went into conference immediately with Jerome, and the District Attorney suddenly discovered a way to stop the fight, injunction or no injunction. An action of the penal law provides that any citizen may go before a magistrate and take a warrant for any person or persons believed to be about to commit a crime. Magistrate Paul Kovitsky, sitting in the Tombs Court, was prepared to issue such a warrant. George Engle, counsel to Sheriff Foley, and Under-sheriff John Gilchrist were likewise prepared to present themselves at the Fairmont with the warrant and arrest all concerned in the affair. No injunction could keep them out. When Manager Gibson learned of the plan he announced to District Attorney Jerome that the club would not attempt to go ahead with the show. It was the intention of the police officers to arrest the fighters, the referee and Gibson.

Gibson said that the club directors felt that they were perfectly safe in going ahead with all arrangements, as they believed that they were complying in every way with the law, and they are still inclined to think that it will be so decided if the matter is brought to court.

"We were prepared to go ahead," said Gibson, "because the club is a bona fide one. Still, if it meant that we were to be involved in a dispute with the authorities, it was a good plan to call the bout off entirely."

Once More "Mitchell the Tailor"

Uses His Brains and Money For Your Benefit!

Following my recent big buy of the high-grade stock of Barnes & Smit, the swell Fifth Ave. tailors, I take over another ultra top class lot of imported woolens. For Spot Cash I buy the stock of one of New England's leading "Tailors to the trade"—the University Tailors, Inc., 30 Kingston St., Boston.

The University Tailors, who did one of the largest mail order businesses in the United States, transacted with a good class of small tailors, closed their doors recently after a long and honorable career, with a large stock of high-class cloth on hand.

The agents commissioned to sell the stock, recognizing "Mitchell the Tailor" as the one man in New England capable of making a big cash buy and also knowing my habit of buying big of "Good Things" for my customers, sold the stock to meet my figure, which was so low that I hardly hoped it would receive their serious consideration when I offered it.

As a Fall advertising feature and also on account of having a big stock of the Barnes & Smit purchase on hand, I am going to sacrifice the University Tailors' woolens and make them up into suits and overcoats at $8—a price that will scarcely cover the interest on my invested cash.

At this time I wish to apologize to the public for the suggestion of egotism in the simplicities of this announcement. I assure them no impression was desired, with the fact that I am always keenly alert to conditions which make for your benefit and always use my brains and money to get you the best cloth on the market at the lowest possible price.

That is why Mitchell succeeds while other tailors go to the wall.

What do you consider a good suit?
We can save you 20 per cent. on a suit in the Mitchell district.

MIKE TWIN IS GETTING SOME HARD WORKOUTS

Mike Twin Sullivan is getting all the rough handling he wants for his bout with the forcible Terry Martin at the Armory A. A. next week as he has his husky young brother boxing with him in practice and the youngster who weighs pounds over the welterweight is giving pointers of outside fighting to his brothers in the matter of all round cleverness and hitting.

Some of Mike's Cambridge friends have been under the impression that the champion could not get in his best shape for such a wicked fighter as Martin but they doesn't bother the lighter of the widely known twins. He has beaten Melody Welbeat Martin and so he considers that is sufficient dope to give him some advantage.

Many a bout has been upset by such dope and Martin is just the boy who will give the crafty ringster from across the Charles any amount of trouble.

Martin will go into the bout confident that Mike cannot knock him out and he will take chances with his own punch which is something worth keeping away from.

HERMAN LONG DIES IN DENVER

Herman Long, one of the most noted baseball players in the United States, is dead in Denver at the Oakes Home for Consumptives.

Long was twice captain of the Boston Nationals in the nineties, and played on the championship Boston teams of 1891, '92, '93, also in 1897 and 1898, when Boston again won the pennant.

In the opinion of many baseball experts, Long never had a peer at his old position at shortstop, not only in fielding, but also in batting, base running and generalship.

Long's last appearance in major league company was with the New York Americans the first year they were installed in that city.

Later he played with Toronto in the Eastern League and Des Moines in the Western League, retiring in 1905, after more than twenty years of professional ball.

DORCHESTER HIGH LOSES ITS CAPTAIN

Dorchester High School loses its foot ball captain, Hawley Gleason. He has decided to quit school because of a disagreement with Principal Lincoln regarding the courses he should take this year. In his place "Billy" Ross will act as captain. It is expected that Frank Cruickshank will return to school next week, and by so doing he will be a good candidate for the leadership. However, should Cruickshank fail to report, it is thought that Ross will be made the permanent captain.

STRAIGHT DOPE
FOR SPORT FANS

THERE WERE A LOT OF DISAPpointed boxing fans about Boston yesterday when the EVENING AMERICAN printed the news that the bout between Sam Langford and Stanley Ketchel had been called off. The AMERICAN was there first with the news, as it always it, and the Fairmount Club's mission was the all absorbing topic of conversation in sport circles. I fail to see where a boxing bout between Langford and Ketchel is a greater infraction of the law than one between Ketchel and O'Brien, or between any other two men. They hold them in New York on two or three times each week without interference.

BASEBALL PLAYERS ARE LIKE children: give them a new toy and they will work it to death. Fred Lake bought shin guards for his catchers, and from the looks of things they wear them to bed with them. They are very handsome and look quite natty on the underpinning of both Carrigan and Donahue, but both men would make a big hit with me if they discard them when they go to bat. The absence of the guards might let them do a little better base running.

THEY ARE GOING TO HAVE SOME fine times over in Brooklyn next Monday night, when Jimmy Walsh and Joe Coster meet at the Bedford Club. As Jimmy has done on many previous occasions, he has had to give away weight, this time conceding young Coster in the neighborhood of six pounds. It should be a good bout, even at that, and Jimmy ought to win although he is up against no easy proposition.

MAX BAKER, A LOCAL BOY WHO has made many friends during his half dozen bouts at the Armory A. A., made his metropolitan debut Monday night when he takes on Max Hedlton in the semi final to the Jimmy Walsh-Joe Coster mill. Not only will it mark young Baker's first appearance outside of Boston, but it is also the toughest proposition he has yet undertaken. He is a clever, game little fighter, and with proper care should some day make his mark in the ring world. He thinks with his head, and that helps a lot.

G. A. R., SOUTH BOSTON.—YOU'RE but another of those pin heads who get up on their hind legs, and bellow every time I have anything favorable to say about the fighting ability of Sam Langford or Jack Johnson. I expressed my opinion of this world beating fighting duo days, and as I have not changed I still think that a white man wipes out the color line when he enters the ring to fight a negro. Fighters all look alike to me, and the only color I won't stand for is yellow, and I'm willing to bet that you have a big punch of that in your make-up. I never saw you, but I believe I could pick you out on the street. I'd know you by the shape of your head and that narrow place between your ears.

A. D. W.—IN ANSWER TO YOUR query as to whether or not gambling on horse races is legal in Rhode Island, I must say it is not. So if you are contemplating getting into the game, you'd better pick out some other State. Why not try it right here in Boston? They'll stand for a lot here and it doesn't make much difference whether it is legal or not.

JOSEPH HEMPSTEAD, NO. 8 DARNEY place, Roxbury.—Who gave you a license to try to be a kidder. Your attempt to be facetious on that wire walking business makes me believe that you got a bum steer when you were told you were quite a cut up. If you will come along with any question that would indicate an intelligence anywhere near human I'd try to answer it in a way that would percolate even through your knob.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Will you please tell me who scored the last run in the Cleveland baseball game? I mean, who finished, holds and all runners on base, but the man coming from second to third on drawers to score on the error, and the second baseman muffing the ball and throwing home in time to retire the runner, should not the man who made the error with an error on the first play and given an assist for getting the second out of the play?
D. Y. C.

Technically the error can be scored, but it is not usual to do so when the fielder retires one man, as that is all he is required to do. In case an outfielder muffs an easy fly, but recovers in time to force a baserunner, he is exempt by rule from an error, and the principle is the same as to the play cited.

THERE IS A LETTER HERE FOR Carl Lique, champion paper weight boxer of the world.

MANY OF THE ATHLETES WHO ARE going to run in the Brockton Fair Marathon have entered the Everett Y. M. C. A. ten mile run September 25, to get a good preliminary trying out. Entry blanks can be obtained of J. F. Casey, 9 Beacon street, Boston.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
To settle a bet please answer this in your column: Is there a baseball player, or players, connected with the Boston Red Sox, and also the Boston Nationals? If there was he or they played together of the two played with the Red Sox?
Medford, Sept. 20. Tom C. C.

Neither played with the Red Sox. Chesbro was signed a few days ago, but has not played yet.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
Dear Sir: In reply to a challenge which appeared in your columns, recently, would say that the Wellingtons would be glad to send a team, Sept. 8, to football at their called open date, which at present is October 9. The Wellingtons are also desirous of meeting the fastest teams in the 150-pound class, or any fast 150-pound team, the Technology of Wolf, Boston, should be a formidable opponent. Address all letters to Wilfrid Millett, 16 Bassemore, Wilfrid Millett, Matinson, Mass., manager Wellingtons.

LANGFORD HAS THE JOLT WHILE KETCHEL SWINGS

By TAD.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Sam Langford, the colored contender for pugilistic honors, is a second edition of the famous "Barbadoes Demon," Joe Walcott. Standing but a feet 6½ inches high, and with a chest measure of 46 inches expanded (and it is expanded quite often), Sam is almost as wide as he is tall.

Like Walcott, he resembles the ace of spades in color and his grin is a ringer for the one worn by Joe in his palmy days.

Langford differs from Ketchel in the matter of punching. He seldom pulls a back swing; seldom switches his body around before he hits; seldom misses one to land the other. He stands up close, rests for days on the slightest move of an opponent. His most dangerous kick is that little dip. Big John Wille, the Chicago heavyweight, will testify to that. Sam locked him along the ropes at Luna Park and while they were close jumped one in that travelled half a foot or so, and Wille fell as though dead. The majority of those in the house that night didn't even see Langford hit his man and thought the latter quit.

There is very little movement in the body of the colored man when he does hit. He just bobs them from his elbow and they tumble. He did the same thing here at the Fairmont Club the night he met Jimmy Barry. Jimmy backed into a corner and Sam, with his left around Barry's head, rocked it down in a second and put the jolt to it. Jim collapsed. It didn't seem hard, but there was a world of power behind it. A minute or so after he had gone Barry tried to make a speech, but was still so groggy that he had to hold on to the ropes in order to keep on his feet.

The easy manner in which he disposed of Tiger Smith and Ian Hague over in London has set the British fight fraternity sore him.

Hugh McIntosh, the Australian promoter, after his trip to London, said that no fighter in the world would draw the Langford-Ketchel mill in the big English town. The night Langford dropped Smith, Lord Lonsdale offered to bet $25,000 that he could beat Tommy Burns, but Burns wanted none of him. He now wants to get $20,000, win, lose or draw, to face the tar baby.

Stanley Ketchel fears no man. He would feel just as confident whether he faced Billy Papke, Langford, Jeffries or Johnson. He feels that he can beat 'em all. There is no fear in him, that is why he has agreed to meet his ebony adversary.

Langford's experience is a trifle more than that of the cowboy. He has been in the ring a bit longer, has fought a bit better, than the Montana gent.

Ketchel's experience in fast company has been gained in a year and a half, while Langford has been gathering for years and years.

Six years ago he beat Joe Gans, who was at that time in his prime. He also fought a draw with Walcott before the latter took a licking, pugilistically. A year or so later he stood off Jack Johnson for fifteen rounds, and although he lost the decision he made the champion hustle all the way.

Baseball News and Notes

The Giants have secured another Indian for next season. He is Jesse Bell Williams, a full blooded Oneida, a member of the Marion, O., State league.

The first real big series of the season in the American league opened at Philadelphia, when the Athletics and the Tigers clashed in the first of four games. If was a battle royal. They find the Tigers and the Athletics clashed just as they did in the first game of the series, the pitchers' duel, the crowd failed to lend their cheers and the Athletics scored the winning pennant.

As long as the Giants won't be able to play a championship game with the Yankees and the Dodgers, they will be tickled to death to play the big league team at the end of the season. In 1904, when the Polo Grounds captured the Yankee pennant and the Giants were shut out in the National league's series was between the Giants and Highlanders. Manager Brush and John J. McGraw refused to play, even for the players' end of the receipts. This will be the first meeting between the two teams.

The Old Roman has certainly a variety of additions in names among the players lined up for next year. The list includes a Scandinavian, an Italian, Jim Germain and a dozen more nationality around to be established at the plates. Somebody has about fifty players in camp at the training next spring. He's using every the material to pay for that half million the other plant gave a corps of contributors.

Just before the Naps left Detroit Saturday night Chief Bender came around to tell them all good-bye, and that he was sure, this time if he wasn't, he would be released. Some of the Tigers had made him pay to see the last game that day. "I call it a pretty high price for those fellows to hold me up at the gate to see little 75 cents," said Chief. "I guess I'm not worth it to them." The Chief's sense of humor is positively disgraced. He will be back next season, and I'll bet a dollar to a red cent on it. This is a safe bet.

THE TYRANNY OF THE HOME

What Women Suffer Most From Is the Physical Tyranny of the Home. Men Suffer Most from Spiritual Tyranny

By DOROTHY DIX

THE tyranny of the home sends women to the grave and men to the divorce court.

What women suffer most from is the physical tyranny of the home. What men suffer most from is the spiritual tyranny of the home.

If the true confessions in nine divorces out of ten were revealed it would shock the startling fact that the name of the stone who first lured the side-stepping husband away from his wife was Miss Liberty.

Afterward, of course, she was Mamie or Sissie or Carrie, as the case may be, or she called herself by some other alias; but to begin with it was just plain old Liberty for whom he hankered, and with her he wanted to found a monastery or a nunnery.

And his affection for Liberty was purely platonic, and if his wife had only opened the door to her, and made her a guest at their fireside, he would never in the world have gone trailing off after her and met the Maenic or Posie or Carrie that he did.

Liberty Man's Passion

But his wife didn't. She shut the door in Liberty's face and locked it, and put the key in her pocket. Wherefore the man climbed out over the transom.

Women forget in dealing with men that the supreme deathless passion of man's soul is for freedom. It is the one thing for which, since the world began, he has got up and left home, and wife, and children. He is still doing it, and woman is still combating it, and that's the reason marriage is a failure and is going to continue to be a failure until women make up their minds to handle the despotism of the home and grant their husbands a few constitutional rights.

There is nothing more peculiar about the marriage state than that, while every man observes every other Bendigo grounding under the tyranny of the home, he thinks that something else is going to escape.

He has a vision of his own home as a place called Liberty Hall, in which he shall come and go free and unquestioned. He imagines that when business or pleasure detains him down town he will stay with no more compunction than occurred when he did so in his bachelor days.

Must Prove an Alibi

It never crosses his simple and unsophisticated mind that he will not be followed to inquire his old friends to his own table, or the read and smoke in any part of the house that he desires.

In a word, his home is to be a place of freedom, of ease, of comfort, of dear companionship, the best of all the good things that his money pays for, and the one thing worth all the labor and sacrifice it has cost him.

What does he get? What DOES he get? He finds out, to begin with, as a general thing, that a home is a jail and a wife is a jailer. Go and come as he pleases? Not much. For every article of freedom, of ease, of comfort, of dear companionship, the best of all the good things that his money pays for, and the

it will not do for him to say that he met up with an old friend and took him to dinner and the theater afterward, or that he joined a party of men who were going to have a game of cards.

If he does tell her the truth his wife raises such a row that it makes him a liar ever afterward. Yet the man may know that he neither drinks nor plays cards to excess, that he really needed the relaxation of change and amusement after a hard day's work, and that he was just as innocently employed as he would have been if he had been out to a bridge party with his wife.

He also discovers that he cannot invite anybody to the house unless their passport is vised and O. K'd by his wife.

It's no use for him to tell her that Thompson has been like a brother to him, and has helped him with advice and money, and stood by him through trials innumerable. His wife doesn't like the way Thompson dresses, and Thompson gets a frozen out that makes him feel as if he were Dr. Cook at the North Pole.

It's no use for him to tell his wife that Jolly, good-natured Mrs. Smith used to mend his clothes when he was a boy getting a start in business and that she nursed him when he was sick, and made him welcome to her table in hard luck times when he was hungry. His wife makes up her mind that Mrs. Smith is not better than she should be, and administers a snub that makes poor Mrs. S. go home trembling with indignation and pity.

It Is "Her" House.

Nor dares any man have the liberty of doing as he pleases in his own house. That privilege belongs exclusively to his place of business and his club. His house, and the sofa cushions, and the curtains thereof, and also the bureau drawers, and the books in the closets, are the exclusive property of his wife.

Furthermore, a man ascertains that in the home there is no liberty of opinion. If he is to have any peace he must agree with his wife and his wife's mother. If they believe in the simple life, he is fed on cereals and vegetables, and plain boiled meat, no matter how much he hungers after highly seasoned dishes. If they are prohibitionists he would no more dare to bring home a bottle of wine and serve it at the table than a downtrodden serf of Russia would dare to get up and read a revolutionary document on the steps of the Czar's palace.

It does not matter if the man is a hundred times as intelligent and moral and respectable as his wife's family, and a thousandfold more capable of forming a just opinion on any subject. The tyranny of the home is upon them, and he is powerless to combat it, for in some inscrutable way, in domestic life the victory always goes to the weak, and the fool rules.

The man's only hope of not being utterly crushed is to escape from home, which he does, with disastrous results to all concerned.

The reason why so many men don't marry is the same reason that would prevent a free citizen of a republic from taking out naturalization papers in Russia.

Women must wake up to a realization of this, and that if they want to get husbands, and keep them, they must modify the tyranny of the home.

Love That Is Dead

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

OF all the pitiful bottles in the world, the most pitiful is that of a woman trying to rekindle a dead love, and it is as hopeless as it is pitiful. The man is not to blame; in fact, fundamentally, the fault is the woman's. She has ceased to attract.

How or why she does not know and she would crawl on her knees and kneel to regain that precious lost love but its revival is beyond the power of either the man or herself.

The man may be loyal to her, but what woman who really loves is satisfied with loyalty without love?

In almost all cases her rival is younger than she, and no older woman can hold her own against the irresistible radiance of youth.

Takes It for Granted

She resorts to measures, which call her pride to flee quick, and all the time she knows that the fight is a losing one. She spares no effort to keep the man at her side and if he is a good man he stays, but his eyes and his mind are elsewhere.

And the younger woman takes his interest for granted—as boy right. She has not youth, and is not the other woman and what should she want with a man's attention if it is pitiful, pitiful—that one-sided fight! If only nature had so constituted a woman that when man's love died hers died also. What a world of pain she would have been spared!

But that is not woman's nature, she must go on faithfully loving until her passionate tender woman heart ceases to beat. Love is not made to order and a third man or a fourth man whose love has grown cold would have things different if he could.

There are, of course, many men who live true to the end of their days, but it is owing to the woman's wisdom and good sense rather than to the man's faithfulness.

Man loves youth and beauty and he is never too old to be attracted by them. Woman also loves these qualities, but she is content to watch and sympathize with them, while man, on the contrary, waits to mingle with and be one with them.

When a woman sees her middle-aged husband side by side with a boy of twenty-one she makes no contrast between them; she does not make unflattering comparisons between the thin gray hair and the bass-ringlet brown.

It Will Be So Always

But I have yet to find the man who after gazing at the rosy cheeks of sweet one-and-twenty does not gaze just a trifle discontentedly at the faded complexion of his middle-aged wife. He can't help it, poor thing; he is built that way, and as long as the world lasts he will follow the dictates of his roving fancy and woman will suffer.

I have seen a man absolutely devoted to a girl and quite satisfied with his choice, when along comes another girl, and slowly but surely his interest in the first girl has waned, and the second has taken her place; and the man has fought hard against the new attraction, too, but, though he might have maintained his outward loyalty, he could not control his heart.

Fortunately women do get over the first love blunt. Nature attends to that and lays the soothing balm of time on her daughters' sore hearts, but no one but the woman who has suffered that pain can ever fully appreciate its sting.

It is of no use to say to a woman, "Your love is gone; why don't you rather take your defeat with dignity?" In her heart she says, "But do I care for pride? I want love, the love of that one man; it is mine by right. What right has any other woman to steal it from me?"

She has no right, but she has the hard part of it. And sometimes she does not even win it, but the more gives it regardless of our one's rights or wishes.

And if it will be like that so long as there are men and women in the world.

THE HAPPY DAYS.

By KENNETT HARRIS.

"I SUPPOSE you think I'm a fool," said the bill clerk, indignantly.

The cashier coughed deprecatingly. "Well, I wouldn't go quite so far, Johnny," he replied. "It's not a nice thing to say, whatever one may think. But you'll own that you are young."

"Sure," said the bill clerk. "You won't find Ohio mold in my think piece, I hope. My bilde's fairly loose yet, I'm thankful to say. I'm not terrified of ossified, as yet, thank you, kindly. Certainly I'm young."

"Indisputably," agreed the cashier, suavely. "Well, you'll get bravely over that in the course of time. In the years to come, the cows will no longer attempt to browse on you under the impression that you are a salad. I was young myself once, Johnny."

"No, you must have been a hot sport," observed the bill clerk sarcastically.

I was," admitted the cashier. "I was referred to as 'a dasher' and a 'jim-dandy' in those days, terms that implied a large admiration not unmixed with awe. Furthermore, I, myself, believed myself to be a dasher, a full petalled and flourishing flower of the field. When I look at you, Johnny, and see you swollen with the consciousness of superior attainments, I think of myself as I was in those youthful days, and feel a sigh."

"You needn't have any on my account," said the bill clerk.

"Right to think of the disillusionment that came to me later on," said the cashier. "It would almost weep."

"You can seek the privacy of the lavatory and do a little weep if it would relieve you any," suggested the bill clerk. "I don't want you sobbing around me though."

"I will again to see the gaudy garments that you wear and think that I too was once addicted to gaudiness," went on the cashier. "I remember wearing an old gold necktie one day and a peacock blue the next. A plum-colored cutaway coat went with it and trousers that clung lovingly to my manly limbs, revealing their symmetry in every line. They were not trousers, come to think of it; they were pants."

The Happy Days

"Plum-colored pants for particular people," suggested the bill clerk. "I'd give know what you looked like," he added. "There's a cigar sign handed down to us that must have been a ringer for you, only it has a skyblue coat and cherry-colored pants. I suppose sometimes you stayed up late as 10 or 11 o'clock—what?"

"I cannot deny it," answered the cashier. "We drank beer and smoked cigars, too, I remember. We hadn't advanced to absinthe cocktails and cigarettes then, but I guess we felt just about as devilish, and the headaches were probably about as unpleasant as the kind you have. Ah, me!"

"It's too bad the happy days are gone, isn't it?" said the bill clerk, sympathetically.

"The happy days are now," said the cashier. "I realize it when I get a glimpse of your socks and note the construction of your collar and see the bulge of your corns through your shoes. I understand the racking strains that dress is to you."

"I don't mind wearing a tightfitting purple pants would be," retorted the bill clerk.

"The same thing exactly," declared the cashier. "It doesn't make the least difference. You are reaching your hair back and I plastered mine down on my forehead, but you are animated by the same maudlin vanity that possessed me in the years gone by. I used to imagine that I was almost immediately fatal to the fair sex. You have about the same fallen today."

"I'm flattered if I can see what you had to go on," remarked the bill clerk.

"I'm doubly piggered if I can see what your claims to pulchritude consist in, my dear Johnny," retorted the cashier. "If you somewhat nasty visage, you eyes and a satisfied smirk are considered points of beauty, I have the wrong ideals, that's all. But you don't need to be beautiful if you are rich, so cheer up and try to change your habits. Acquire a modest, self-sacrificing manner. Try to acquire the possibility of there being subjects on which you are not thoroughly informed, and of there being sounds sweeter to the listening ear than ever the melodious accents of your own voice. When you get up in the morning, say to yourself, 'I am a worm,' unless you find and in time a deep conviction; and, finally, pay respectful attention to what is said by your elders, for they have been young and haven't forgotten it, to know better."

"They've got over being young, all right," said the bill clerk.

No Longer Young

"They've lost all of their good looks, most of their hair and some of their teeth, and they make a weak-kneed bluff at not caring. Those that haven't got dyspepsia are grouchy about something else. They all stopped learning anything twenty years ago and about the only thing they can do real well now is to lie about what they used to do. Some of 'em think they're smart, and they're about the worst of the lot."

"There's nothing personal to this, I trust?" inquired the cashier, sweetly.

"There isn't any elderly person answering to that description around this office—not after 6 o'clock in the evening."

DEVOTION AND JEALOUSY WERE never more forcefully pictured than in "The Locked Box." Free with the Sunday American.

Fog Horn Tales

Captain Pinochle and the Savings Bank Fish

By HANK.

THE "Hoo-oo" of the automatic horn had just died away as the Pilot entered the lighthouse and slumped down into a chair without saying a word.

"H'm," muttered Captain Pinochle, "something gone wrong, hey?"

"Yep," answered the Pilot, curtly, and began filling his pipe.

"Well?" said the Captain, inquiringly, "out wit it. Is it some money troubles?"

The Pilot nodded.

"I thought so," said Captain Pinochle, "whenever I see a man wot has a look on his face like a yellow dog I know it can't be noddings else but money troubles."

"A yellow dog," shouted the Pilot. "Why, you piece of salt horse, what do you mean by calling me a yellow dog. Do you know what I think of you—you——"

"Hoo-oo" blew the fog horn just in time to cut short a flow of invectives that might have caused trouble, for the Pilot was angry clear through.

"Dot horn has a blessing disguised," said the Captain when quiet had been restored. "You vass going to call me lots of names, but the 'hoo-oo' made you count ten and now you think better of it. It iss a pity dot all dunces vert half compere like you could not half fog horns vith dem all dot time dot could blow off ven dey vass about to forget themselves. You know I did not mean you vass a yellow dog."

The Pilot Lost $100

"That's what you said, though," exclaimed The Pilot, somewhat mollified.

"Ach, you is too excitable," repited the Captain. "Now, before dot horn blows again, tell me your troubles."

"Well, my pocketbook fell overboard this morning, and I had just been paid. That's all," said the Pilot.

"How much vass in it?" asked the Captain.

"About $100," said the Pilot.

"One hundred dollars—one hundred dollars," echoed the Captain, "iss that all. Vy worry about dot. Vait till you lose ten thousand gliders and den you haf cause to worry."

"Ten thousand gliders," exclaimed the Pilot; "how did you come to lose that much?"

"It vass easy," said the Captain simply. "It vass because I invested in watered stock. You haf heart off der fishing banks?"

"What have they got to do with it?" asked the Pilot.

"Much," replied the Captain. "Ve had a fishing banks near Heidelberg in Germany by my house. You day I caught a fish de kind dot I had neffer seen before. I heard afterward that it vass vot dey call a kangaroo fish. It had a pouch, it vass not in stomach. Yet it vass I don't know, but I got an idea for somethings.

"At dot time all der banks vere shaky and nobody vould put any money in dem. So vun day I took my net and vent out in der ocean and caught many of dese kangaroo fish. I put dem all alive in a little inlet right near my house and stretched a net across der entrance to der sea, so dat der fish could not get avay. Ven vot you suppose I did?" asked his companion.

The Savings Bank Fish.

"Had fish for dinner every day, I suppose," said the Pilot.

"Vot, eat rose 'wonderful fish?' exclaimed the Captain. "You iss crazy. No, I hat by dot time saved up ten tousand gliders from my vages as captain, I vass afraid of der banks and afraid to keep dem in der house, so I invented my own savings banks. First, I fed der fish effery day until dey vas very fat, den I discovered dot if you threw dem a stone or sumdings dey could not eat it vent into der pouch. So you see I vas able to pay dem all my ten tousand gliders. At last ven all my fortune vass inside der dishes I fill safe."

"But what did you do when you wanted some money?" asked the Pilot.

"I vould catch a fish," replied the Captain, "ven dat fish, vas grilled so, oh, it vass a beautiful scheme, but it failed. De fish, you know, vater. Vun day der tide vas like it neffer rose before, and der sea vent right up to effer der net. So imagine I found all der savings bank fish had scooted avay, never der net since den I haf had to work for a liffing."

The Pilot's good humor had returned by this time, and he was smiling when the Captain finished. His smile, however, excited the Captain's suspicions, and he inquired:

"Vy you smile, hey? Do you tink it a smiling matter to lose ten tousand gliders?"

"No," replied the Pilot, "but I couldn't understand how the fish swam out to sea, seeing that Heidelberg, according to the maps, is nowhere near the ocean."

"Vat I care about maps," roared the Captain. "You——"

"Hoo-oo!" went the foghorn.

REMOVE YOUR

FRECKLES

Dainty Cream That is a Wonderful Treatment for This Trouble.

If you want to remove your freckles, use a remedy that is made purposely for this trouble. Freckles are really a special disease of the skin and can be removed only by special treatment. A specially designed cream, Othine, double strength, is sold by druggists throughout the country under the name Freckle Kreme Othine, a dainty preparation that is used by society women in New York as well as in this city and without a single failure reported.

We have sold it to our best trade and with unfailing success, so that we gladly recommend it for removing freckles. Get it at any of the following druggists: Jordan Marsh Co., Shepard Norwell & Co., Filene's, Raymond's, Tappan & Dutton Co., and see how quickly it removes your freckles. Usual treatment from $1. Sufficient quantity for minor cases of Summer freckles 60c.

THE LATEST STYLES IN KNITTING AND CROCHETING

A New and Exclusive Sweater Design

Fashion insists that, for most purposes, sweaters must be "dressy." Here is an original Fleisher model that certainly fills this requirement. It has the lines and fit of a fashionably tailored coat with a richness and softness of texture that no cloth can imitate. Two boxes Fleisher's Germantown Zephyr, seven yards silk braid, and two silk frogs are all the materials required. In such a garment the stitch must be perfectly even, the texture firm, and it must retain its original shape. Fleisher's Germantown Zephyr will positively produce these results.

Full directions for making this and many other new and staple articles may be found in Fleisher's Knitting and Crocheting Manual. Also, a complete course of instruction in the various stitches.

Society Whips in Berkshires Coach Parade

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

The one great end all important event in the Berkshires this week was the coaching parade, held yesterday, and in connection with which there were innumerable luncheons, dinners and motor parties. The fair was arranged by the indefatigable Katherine Carey, whose fame as a driver of four-in-hands is widespread. Mrs. George Westinghouse, one of the most prominent matrons of the hunting set, opened her grounds for the parade, one of the most imposing features of which was the run over the white marble roads of the park, where the handsome large fountains were playing and around the shores of Laurel Lake.

Mrs. Richard C. Dixey, Mrs. and Mrs. Joseph H. Choate, Miss Mabel Choate, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Choate, Jr., Edwin D. Morgan, minister to Cuba; Miss Kitty Lawrence, Mrs. John Sloane, the Robert W. Pattersons, the Thomas Shields Clarkes, Miss Irene Bigelow Mrs. William H. Bradford, Mrs. Lindsey Fairfax, Miss Mary de Peyster Cary, Mrs. George H. Morgan and the Richard Watson Gilders were among the guests whom Mrs. Westinghouse invited to Sunset House at Erskine Park to view the parade.

Boston society women are taking an active interest in the hunt clubs this Fall. Many take keen delight in "following the hounds." Not a hunt is conducted but scores of women are out as participants or onlookers. This is especially true of the Norfolk Hunt Club.

Mrs. Francis Lee Higginson, Jr., and her children are coming to Boston for the Autumn week's to visit her grandfather, T. Jefferson Coolidge, who presented her at the court of St. James soon after her coming out. Mr. Higginson is to London, where business interests compel a family residence.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Lowell (Henrietta Sargent) are at Brookline. They completed their stay in the Berkshires, where they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robb de Peyster Tytus at their well appointed cottage in Pittsfield. They made the trip to Brookline by auto.

The wedding of Miss Madeline Hawes, daughter of Mrs. Edward H. Hawes, and Edward Wendell Morse, jr., will take place in the Sears chapel, Longwood, Wednesday evening, Sept. 29, at 8 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur T. Bradlee, Miss Gertrude Bradlee, Master Jack Bradlee, Boston, are on an auto tour through the White Mountains, as are Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Sturgis, also of Boston, and Fred W. Paine of Brookline. In the Berkshires on an auto trip are Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Scheres, Boston, Mr. and Mrs. John Kelsey, Cambridge; Mr. and Mrs. Curtis J. Judd, Brookline.

Guy Lowell of Brookline, who is to be one of the ushers at the wedding of Miss Louise Gallatin and Charles Wyrick day to-morrow, was one of the guests at the bachelor dinner which Mr. Guy gave last evening at the Union Club in New York, for his usher. The dinner was a most extended with as little formality as possible. Only relatives and a few of the most intimate friends of both families have been invited to the ceremony, but the reception which is to follow. The wedding will take place in St. Mary's Church, Rye.

Miss Gallatin is the daughter of Mrs. Albert Gallatin and the granddaughter and relative of the family of Gays in this city. The groom of Mr. Guy at the bachelor dinner last evening were Robert H. Gay, another relative of the family; Guy Lowell, Chester H. Aldrich, Joseph Howland Hunt, Francis K. Sims, and William Beekman and Albert Pingree Gallatin, a brother of Miss Gallatin, who will give the sister in marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Gay will make their home at Wyckoff, N. J.

An Autumn wedding of considerable interest to Boston and Newport friends of the Whytes of Providence is that of Miss Ellen Whitte, second eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Maxwell Whitte, and Sidney Russell Mason of Worcester. The wedding ceremony will be performed in the Whitneyville congregational church at noon on Wednesday, October 6, and a wedding breakfast will be given at the Manor, the residence of the Whittes, at 12:30.

William Ordway Partridge, the New York sculptor, gave an address before a large gathering at Bar Harbor last evening. Among those who were patronesses of the entertainment were Mrs. Henry F. Dimock, who is a sister of Henry M. Whitney of Brookline; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lowe Jones, Mrs. Millis B. Carpenter and August Franzen.

A Thrilling, Absorbing Story by the Author of "The Mystery of the Yellow Room"

HOW long did I remain thus, lying on the ground? One hour? Two? When I arose, I was so stiff that I could scarcely stir and my mind was as worn out as my body—worn out as distinct. In the course of my unthinkable hypotheses, I had even gone so far as to ask myself whether the Larsan who had been in the potato sack had not succeeded in satisfying himself for Darzac when had carried him off in the little English cart with Toby at the head of it, meaning to throw him into the gulf of Castillon. I could picture the body of the victim rising up suddenly and ordering M. Darzac to take its place.

As senseless as was the idea of this substitution, it was nevertheless, in a certain degree, pardonable. Rouletabille was a little to blame for it by his fashion of talking to Larsan as a god of metamorphosis. And after casting it aside, I returned to the sole possible idea under which Larsan could have taken the place of Darzac—the idea of a substitution before the marriage ceremony at the church of the victim rising up suddenly and ordering M. Darzac to take its place.

As senseless as was the idea of this substitution, it was, nevertheless, in a certain degree, pardonable. Rouletabille was a little to blame for it by his fashion of talking to Larsan as a god of metamorphosis. And after casting it aside, I returned to the sole possible idea under which Larsan could have taken the place of Darzac—the idea of a substitution before the marriage ceremony at the church when Mlle. Stangerson—Mme. Darzac returned to Paris after three months' absence in the Midi.

The despairing glaint which Robert Darzac, believing himself mistaken, had allowed to escape his lips only a little while before, in my hearing, was sufficient to banish this supposition from my head. Now him again entering the Rue Saint-Nicolas du Chardonnet, in which parish he had registered their banns, to come and take place—perhaps, though I, because there is no darker nor more gloomy church in all Paris.

I, who sat beneath the arch of the gardener's postern and I was just about to enter the Court of the Bold when it occurred to me that I heard something moving. It sounded as though a door might have been closed. Then there was a sound of wood striking on iron. I thrust my head out from under the arch and I believed that I could see the shadow of a person near the door of the Bold. It was a shadow which somehow seemed to mingle with that of the castle itself.

I snatched my revolver from my pocket and with three steps was at the place where I believed I had seen the shape. But it was there no longer. I could see nothing but darkness. The door of the castle was closed and I was certain that I had not left it open. I was disturbed and anxious. I felt that I was not alone—who, then, could be near? Could it be possible if that shadow had existed elsewhere than in my imagination, it could have existed only within the New Castle or most still be in the court.

And the court was deserted.

I listened attentively for more than five minutes without making the slightest sound. Nothing! I must have been mistaken. But, nevertheless, I did not even think of going and so slowly as I could. I ascended the staircase which led to my chamber. When I reached it, I locked myself in and only then began to breathe freely.

This vision or whatever it had been continued to disturb me more then I was willing to confess to myself, and even after I had gotten into bed I could not sleep. Without my being able to account for it at all this vision and the thought of Darzac again began to mingle strangely in my restless spirit.

The effect on my mind was so strong that, at last, I said to myself: "I shall never know peace again until I am certain that M. Darzac is not Larsan. And I shall take means to settle myself certain, one way or the other, on the first occasion."

Yes, but how? Pull his beard off? My suspicion was baseless, he would take me for a madman, or else he would answer what I was thinking of and such a knowledge would add yet another to the load of suspicions already too heavy for me to bear. Only this misery was lacking to him still—to know that he was suspected of being Larsan.

Suddenly I threw off the bedclothes, jumped up and cried almost aloud:

"Australia!"

At the time of the accident in the laboratory I had accompanied M. Robert Darzac to a dungeon. While his injuries were being attended to, he had been obliged to remove his sooty coat, and the sleeve of his shirt had fallen back, leaving his arm bare through the entire session with the druggist, and placing in full view just above the right elbow, a large talisman, the shape of which resembled that of Australia as it appears on the map in the geography books. Meantime, while the chemist was at work, I had amused myself by trying to trace with my finger on the arm in the positions which they occupied on an actual map, the cities of Melbourne, Sydney, Adelaide, and also directly beneath this large mark, there was another smaller one which was situated like the country known as Tasmania.

And when, by any chance, the thought of that accident had happened to recur to my mind, I had always thought of the hurt done at the chemist's and the birthmark shaped like the outlines of Australia.

And in this sleepless night, it was this thought of Australia that came to me.

Seated on the edge of my bed, I had scarcely and time to congratulate myself upon having found a means to prove decisively the identity of Robert Darzac and to try to devise some way of bringing it to an immediate test, when a singular sound made me prick up my ears. Too sound was repeated—one would have said that gravel was cracking beneath slow and cautious footsteps.

Breathless, I hurried to my door, and with my ear at the keyhole, I listened. Silence for a moment and then once more the same sound—footsteps, beyond a doubt. Someone was now ascending the staircase and someone who desired his presence to be unknown. I thought of the shadow which I had believed I saw as I was entering the Court of the Bold—whose could this be and what was it doing on the staircase? Was it coming up or going down?

Silence again! I profited by it to hastily don my trousers, and, armed with my revolver, I succeeded in opening my door without letting it creak on its hinges. Holding my breath, I advanced to the head of the stairs and waited. I have told of the state of dilapidation of the New Castle. The pale rays of the moon light entered obliquely through the high windows which opened at each landing, cutting with exact squares of soft light the black darkness of the stairway, which was very high and wide. The ruined condition of the chateau, thus lighted up in spots, only appeared more complete. The broken balustrade and railings of the staircase, the walls covering with lizards over which here and there hung floating rags of once priceless tapestry, all these things which I had scarcely noticed in the daylight, struck me strangely in this lonely night, and my whirling brain felt quite prepared to find in this gloomy scene the setting for the appearance of a phantom.

All at once, as I was leaning on the broken balustrade, I saw a shadow which was lighted up by the moonbeams as though it were a daubeau. And I recognized Robert Darzac.

He had reached the second floor, and he, too, stopped. He raised his head and looked in my direction as though he felt that my weight on the floor above him. attentively, I drew back. And then I remembered that my first observation just in time to see him disappear into a corridor which led to another staircase winding up to the battlements. What could this mean? Robert Darzac spending the night in the New Castle? Why did he take such precautions to be unseen? A thousand suspicions crossed my mind—but rather all the more terrible thoughts that I dared not to haunt me since we had been in the Port of Hercules acted me into a shadow which somehow seemed to mingle with that of the castle itself.

I snatched my revolver from my pocket and with three steps was at the place where I believed I had seen the shape. But it was there no longer. I could see nothing but darkness. Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
A FOOLISH GIRL.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I took my lady friend to a theatre last week. While getting the tickets I met another young lady from my home town, whom I had not seen for seven years.

After introducing my friend I suggested that I get three tickets, but the lady whom I had escorted to the theatre objected and threatened to leave me immediately and return home alone if I invited the other young lady to the show. Was I right? F. G. M.

YOU were quite right in inviting your old friend to join you, and your girl friend was very silly to object to your doing so. It was just a little bit of foolishness on her part that prompted her to do so, and you need not be too hard on her.

TOO YOUNG.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Do you think it proper for a young girl sixteen years of age to go out with young men about twenty-five? My mother thinks it is all right, providing I know who I go out with.

Melbourne," "Adelaide." And beneath it there was another little blotch designated as Tasmania.

"You may run it as much as you choose," said Darzac, coldly. "It will not come off."

I begged his pardon a thousand times over, with tears in my eyes, but he would not forgive me until he had made me put of his head which remained firmly attached to his shoulders, instead of coming off in my hand.

Then, only, he allowed me to go back to my room, which I did, cursing myself for an idiot.

Mary Somerville, Great Scholar, True Woman

By REV. THOS. B. GREGORY

MARY SOMERVILLE, one of the most extraordinary women that the race has up to date produced, was the daughter of Admiral Sir William George Fairfax, and was born the 26th of December, 1780, in the Manse of Jedburgh.

It was soon plain to all that Mary Somerville was more than an ordinary child; in fact, all but the downright stupid realized that she was a wonderful child. Destined, as it afterwards well, to write her name high up in the head-roll of fame.

Owing to her pronounced mental superiority and extraordinary precocity she was held back as much as possible in her studies and when through school she had only what might be called a fair education.

But it is hard to suppress the upstrivings of genius, and after the school days were finished the young woman applied herself in secret to the mastery of algebra and euclid, and, quite unassisted, achieved her purpose.

In 1804, when twenty-four years old, Miss Fairfax married Captain Grieg of the British Army, and the Captain dying two years later, she was married in 1812 to Dr. William Somerville, inspector of the Army Medical Board.

The doctor was a splendid man and was as sensible as he was splendid. Realizing the magnificent prize that had come to him in the shape of his talented wife, and being quite willing for her to attain to the full extent of her ability, he, like the true knight that he was, aided her in every way that was possible.

He was willing to be eclipsed by his brilliant spouse. If Heaven had given her the greater shining power, then let her shine, the brighter the better!

Verily, there was a model husband! What is the matter with the wives of the world that they have not already erected a monument a mile high to the memory of Dr. Somerville?

On the Continent—thanks to the knightly courtesy of her husband—Mary Somerville was brought in the way of the most distinguished people of the time—eminent scientists, great preachers and historians, famous artists—the very cream of the intellect of Europe.

In the midst of the constellation of celebrities Mrs. Somerville shone well up with the brightest.

There are men colleagues, even today who, in their zeal opposition to the gospel of women's equality with man, are reckless in crying down the superiority of woman's brain as compared with that of man. But have these ranters read the story of Mary Somerville?

The greatest mathematician that ever lived, Sir Isaac Newton perhaps excepted, was the celebrated Laplace, the author of the "Mecanique Celeste" and the founder of the "Nebula Hypothesis" view of creation, and it would be exceedingly difficult to conceive of a finer compliment than that which Laplace paid Mary Somerville by that great man: "Madame, you are the only woman who understands mathematics."

Another great man, the famous Lord Brougham, desiring a translation of the "Mecanique Celeste" into English, of the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge, appealed to Mrs. Somerville and the result was a success. He was not to be disappointed. In 1831 the translation was ready with her translation, under the title of the "Mechanism of the Heavens," which at once made her famous.

On the strength of the fame won by the translation of the "Mecanique Celeste" Mrs. Somerville was elected honorary member of most of the learned bodies of the Continent, and her bust, by Chantrey, was placed in the gallery set up to that honor of science, the Royal Society of London.

Students of things scientific in the thirties, forties and fifties of the last century read with peculiar avidity and delight the "Physical Geography" and the connection of the Physical Sciences" by Mrs. Somerville, works which, while charming in their clear, crisp style and in the burning enthusiasm which pervades them are a sample of what woman can do, even in the highest realm of intellectual endeavor. One need look no further than the life story of Mary Somerville and the works she left behind her to find in this life story, that great intellect and true womanliness may dwell together in perfect accord. Mary Somerville lived to the venerable age of ninety-two, and to the last moment the "ever womanly" was her distinguishing charm.

TWO BANKERS STRICKEN BY NEW DISEASE

BUTTE, Mont., Sept. 17. A strange new affliction is prevalent among capitalists of Pittsburg. It is a nervous ailment, accompanied by hallucinations, and, according to physicians, is the direct result of overconcentration and impatience in the accumulation of money.

Recently one of the best known bankers in the financial district, a man of wealth and breadth, he talked constantly of the millions he was making, suddenly became violently insane. His mania, John Sloane, who before association with the Heinze copper interests was prominently identified with the Pittsburg Real Estate Trust, was stricken with the same disease. Both men had been prominent in many Pittsburgers to make fortunes, and when the Heinze stocks dropped, his fortune of a million was wiped out.

Another similar case developed today. Charles Dickson of the Real Estate Trust Company, of which Senator George B. Orr is vice-president, collapsed. For several days his nervous condition has been growing worse, and when Mr. Sloan, he became frenzied and talked about great deals which were netting him hundreds of thousands of dollars. It is said that Mr. Dickson's affliction has attracted the attention of his associates.

A consultation in his case was held today by a number of physicians. They decided that a complete rest from business was the only cure to bring about a recovery. Mr. Dickson, it is said, will be taken to a quiet place where he will remain until his nerves are strong again and his hallucinations regarding the accumulation of money is past.

LEAGUE WILL MEET ENVOYS TO IRELAND

A great reception for the returning Delegates of the United Irish League of America to Ireland will take place in Faneuil Hall, was planned at the initial meeting of the season at the Boston Central Branch last night.

The executive committee of the branch, with P. J. Flaherty as chairman, was appointed as committee of arrangements to prepare for the event. The Boston central branch connected with the organization of the enthusiastic meeting held last night in order to counteract the discouraging reports of the U. P. Hibernian Society, would fall under conditions in the Irish race.

NEW YORK MAN HEADS BANKERS

CHICAGO, Sept. 17. With the election of officers this afternoon, the convention of the American Bankers' Association came to a close at the Auditorium.

The list of officers proposed in the most exciting committee was as follows:

President, Joseph T. Talbert of West Virginia; vice-president, P. O. Wattis of Salt Lake, Texas; secretary, Fred R. Fancy, Worth recently elected chairman of executive committee, William Livingstone, Detroit, to be re-elected as member of executive committee, to be selected by the executive committee.

Attacks on the currency bill and strong condemnation of the bill generally point which characterized the speeches made before the convention were the topics of discussion today.

A warning to the public not to be deluded into the belief that all failures of banks or loans relieves them of the duty of making their own judgment in the selection of a bank was sounded by James Stillman, president of the First National Bank of Chicago in an address. The duty of warning the people to refrain and blame anyone from subscribing and bank examining bank failures was characterized by Mr. Forgan as "cowardly, unpatriotic and unmanly."

Legislation prohibiting directors and officers from borrowing from their own banks was advocated. Mr. Forgan declared that honest banking and urged new safeguards for the money of depositors, secured by systems of inspection and certified protection, but by more conscientious fidelity and adherence to sound principles on the part of bankers themselves.

BRIDGEPORT MAN FOR CHICAGO PULPIT

CHICAGO, Sept. 17. Rev. W. T. Stobbart of Bridgeport, Ct., in a letter to the trustees of the Fourth Presbyterian church has accepted a call to the pulpit of the church, and will preach his first sermon in succession to the late Edward A. Larrabee, who has been pastor of the church for seventeen years. Mr. Stobbart will resign from Bridgeport in the latter part of November.

125 LOST WORK BY FIRE.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Sept. 17.—Fire destroyed the plant and the stock of the American Axe and Tool Company today, entailing a loss of $75,000, covered by insurance. Some 125 men are thrown out of work.

IMPORTANT DEALS IN THE REALTY MART

LATHERS' UNION LIKES BOSTON

Captured in the Boston 1905 movement and desirous of witnessing its culmination the delegates at the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union Rockport Hill today decided that a decennial other should be made to have the organization hold its international convention in Boston next year. This will be the first time in the history of the organization that the lathers assisted a convention outside of the United States.

General President W. J. Moberley today presented a report showing a large increase of wood lathers from the U. S. brigade convention and a large increase in the membership of the Amalgamated Wood Workers. The election of officers is expected to be made tomorrow, which will end the business of the delegates who have left on trips to their homes and take up the work in their own locals. It is expected that the decision is to have the most beautiful city in the entire world in 1915, and this lathers' convention should be held here that year.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

HOPPER SCORES IN "A MATINEE IDOL"

MORRISTOWN, Pa., Sept. 17.—There was a large delegation of New Yorkers here to see DeWolf Hopper make his first appearance as a star in his new play:

"A Matinee Idol," the book of which is by Arnold and Bernard and the music by Ludwig Englander.

With a story living make-up and Mary Antin delivery Hopper for three acts gave a delightful and amusing picture of an American actor who has tried his luck on the other side of the pond.

He will remain there until President returns to Washington from his Western trip November 1. Mr. Carpenter is in daily touch with the President by wire. Assistant Secretary to the President Forster returned with Mr. Carpenter.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Steel, Pennsylvania, Reading and Union Pacific are at the front of the movement in Wall Street. The advance of this group was responsible for the rest of the market beyond the securities and because the buying that moves them comes from the high est possible quarters. The fact that Morgan & Co. do not hesitate to advise the purchase of Steel common for par by the first of January, the whole Street has become extremely optimistic and the recent increase in October and January are considered matters of routine.

The report that the Morgan syndicate would have 2,000,000 shares of the stock into the treasury at $50 a share to be believed and can not be confirmed. The trust has clearly right to do this and the deal and the deal proposed would be a good one at that price, but the point of view even for the syndicate members.

Another lift is expected in Steel common before the turn of the year, probably in October. Current business certainly would warrant such action, but there are other considerations. The time plans and outturn appropriations; about $40,000,000 will be required to finish the work. The corporation's net for the year were $78,242,986, and $8,929,918 in the first half of 1909.

No money has been set aside for new construction since the $75,000,000 limit was spent for that purpose. The outlay was $50,000,000 in 1906, $26,300,000 in 1907 and $23,231,231 in 1908. The number of important improvements are said to have been $1,000,000 in 1906, $1,500,000 in sales. Just now, however, the directors have decided to spend $5,000,000 more. This has been thoroughly squeezed out of the company in the past two years, paying for new construction, improvements and additions out of earnings, and that hereafter such expenditures ought to be met by bond. But there has been criticism of the management for not providing for new construction and replenishment charges last year were $15,357,111, as against $25,741,000 in 1907, and $28,753,270 in 1906, and they were only $10,000,000 in the first half of 1909.

These in the second quarter were $2,280,000 more than the corresponding three months. It is probable that a further increase will be made for the current three months. Operations now are up to full capacity. The Pennsylvania and the New York Central are also expanding, and the place orders with the company in a few days for more than 1,000,000 tons.

The movement in Pennsylvania is several times as fine, but an attempt is making now to disentangle it from the speed in connection with the $80,000,000 deal. Gulf & W. I. is the nucleus of the company must do. The great increase of business coming to the company from the McAdoo tunnels and the new Pennsylvania tunnels through Manhattan Island, added to the long list of other improvements has left not a single idle car on he Pennsylvania system, making the stock easy to move in spite of its bulk.

Reading, in addition to the increase of dividend, is expected to get some rights, but there is no official warrant for saying they will come soon. Another unobtrusive advance is explained by a semi-official statement that a subsidiary company is being worked out for its coal properties.

Union Pacific is being picked up by the general public, and especially by insiders, who expect that perhaps within a week something definite may be announced regarding the financing plans, possibly even Thursday. It is significant that several prominent bankers intimately associated with E. H. Harriman and the Union Pacific have abandoned hope of getting a reaction in the stock and are buying the general market freely regardless of prices. These bankers were the ones who pressed the house a month ago and went through the Harriman break with orders to buy everything in their offices. They have been replacing them ever since, but it is noted that they are taking Steel more freely than they did formerly.

Morgan's alliance with Atchison is also helping that issue, although anything of that kind is overdone. The action of the Atchison territory are especially good and the spending of $25,000,000 justify the prediction of a higher dividend. Rock Island has already pressed the ability to pay a dividend on the preferred stock and its friends have not had the security with which insiders of that company usually celebrate any important event.

Calls are being purchased in London for ninety days on Southern Pacific. It will be remembered that the purchase of control of Southern Pacific exchanged all its Southern Pacific preferred, seven per cent. stock, for Southern Pacific common, a six per cent. issue. This must mean that Harriman has secured for Union Pacific the common a seven per cent. dividend. The buying of calls just now is, therefore, significant.

Western Union's mystery was solved by the announcement that the Telephone Trust had agreed to purchase $18,000,000 of New York Telephone stock from the control of the Western Union. The price is said to be about 150. Jugo also has it that the Telephone Trust was resurrected to take actual control of the Western Union Company. Stock at a price of 90 for the stock. It is believed that the operations of Western Union are very unlish on the stock, and with several thousand of the long holding from up to twenty shares apiece it is quite possible for the market to run beyond reasonable bounds and for peculiar conditions of the circulation. Although some very respectable authorities are bearish on Western Union immediately, it must be remembered that the stock can always be a very dangerous speculation.

Per the benefit of those persons who still believe in the bank statement and who do not believe in the Aldrich bill, it should be stated that the surplus reserves of the New York banks are rapidly disappearing. A bad bank statement is expected for next week. Now is the time to get frightened if these things frighten you. Money is borrowed 100 per cent. rates in a stock market selling like this one. As a matter of fact, however, the bank statement does not in the slightest degree indicate the condition of the money market.

The great trusts and railroad corporations have are making preparations to their treasuries to be loaned privately that leading operations of the banks become merely technical. Trust companies can lend more money than any of the second rate national banks in New York and the Union Pacific is a banking institution of tremendous power. Banks loan money to those institutions and charge a commission, but do not enter the transactions on their statements because it is not a loan of bank money. The money is loaned and increase by many millions without showing in the bank statements. The very men who are in charge of this market are in charge of the big banks and if any one believes that they know less about the condition of the money market than the solemn stock market reviewers he is entitled to that opinion, but still prefers to not share in the self-written of assets that the bull campaigners are now planned.

STATE STREET PRICES HEAVY

STATE STREET, Sept. 17. There was an utter lack of interest in the stock market this forenoon and as a result prices were heavy. Perhaps the weather had something to do with the lack of business and the few orders in brokers' hands. There was just enough to cause fractional setbacks.

Arbitrage stocks were soft and followed the course of the New York market, which was also weak. The only striking record ed a point decline to 41½, while such stocks as Lake, North Butte and U. S. Smelting declined was fractionally.

Amalgamated fell over a point to 81¾, and Steel common ran off almost as much to 65¾. Boston was neglected almost entirely in this market, but was a seller of Amalgamated. Weber preferred was also weak, stiffening to 106. The second installment of 50 per cent. for the recent issue of new stock is now payable.

On the curb business was quiet outside of First Mining, which rose to 6¾ on active trading.

ST. PAUL LEADS STOCK MARKET

By T. C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—St. Paul assumed leadership of the stock market in Wall Street today, and under the influence of heavy buying orders advanced five points to a new high record. There were moderate transactions also in the preferred, which rose one and a half points. The buying of these shares was said to be by the best people.

Large blocks of Steel common changed hands several times with ease with which these blocks were purchased showed that the insiders were not in favor of the speculative rise in that security and were handing out some stock to check it. They want a substantial advance, but an orderly one. A good investment demand appeared for the preferred stock, which rose one and a quarter points during the first half hour of business.

Activity in the group of speculatives was led by S. Reality, which advanced 2 points on rumors that the dividend would be increased from 6 to 8 per cent.

American shares were fractionally lower in London and opened about Great Northern preferred in the New York curb trading was dull and prices irregular.

Before the end of the first hour of trading Steel common showed a net gain of a point, with the closing price of yesterday. Reading, Union Pacific and practically other standard shares were lower in sympathy.

Falling from the topmost branches of a chestnut tree on Unit 2 street, Cambridge, Saturday afternoon, David Downey, 106 Hampshire street, Cambridge, sustained a hemorrhage of the brain which may result in his death. He is now on the dangerous list at the Cambridge Relief Hospital.

SUNDAY AMERICAN is the Seventh Day Wonder of New England.

DEATH PLOT FAILS.

SYDNEY, C. B., Sept. 17.—A supposed attempt against the lives of the members of the chemical staff of the Dominion Coal Co. to whose mines a strike is in progress, by means of train wrecking, failed when the locomotive struck a barrel of lime on which an explosive to blow up the West Brook bridge.

COPPER SUIT DECREE WAITS

Edward P. McClellan, counsel for the plaintiff in the suit of the Old Dominion Copper Mining & Smelting Company vs. A. S. Bigelow, asked Judge Sheldon in the Supreme Court today to enter a decree immediately in accordance with the recent decision of the full bench in favor of the company.

Alfred Hemenway, counsel for the defendant, objected to the entry of the decree for the reason that he was to ask the full bench assembled for a re-hearing of the case.

In view of the fact that a re-hearing could not be had before the latter part of October Judge Sheldon refused to order the decree entered at this time.

Cook—Peary and the Pole

Americans May Soon Be Wishing That the Pole Had Remained Undiscovered

Copyright, 1909, by American Journal-Examiner

The people of America are proud of American heroes. But they wish, most sincerely, that heroes could get along without calling each other liars and pretenders.

Dr. Cook may be the discoverer of the Pole. And Peary may, as he says, be the discoverer, and Cook only a pretender. Just at present there is no doubt that sympathy is with Cook.

Peary denounces Cook, says that he can prove him to be dishonest and untruthful—but he has NOT proved it. He should have given his proof with his accusation or withheld his accusation. As things stand, he has injured himself and his country in the eyes of the world.

Unfortunately, Peary has not left open any question as to his keen craving for personal and isolated glory. His own account of his adventure makes it plain that he could not tolerate the sharing of an achievement, EVEN WITH MEN WHO HAD RISKED THEIR LIVES TO MAKE HIS SUCCESS POSSIBLE.

We know of nothing more unpleasant, nothing less calculated to arouse admiration for this country, and for Peary the individual, than his action in sending back all the white men that had risked their lives with him. IN ORDER THAT HE MIGHT BE THE ONLY MAN TO REACH THE POLE AND SHARE WITH NONE HIS GLORY.

A bigger, better nature would have insisted that all of those that shared the danger and discomfort should share in the honor. But Peary sent his white companions back one by one.

It would have taken nothing from the glory of Peary if he had led a thousand white men to the Pole with him. For he was the LEADER, and he would have done better had he arranged to have himself recognized as a broad-minded, unselfish leader.

As it is, his conduct is like that of some actor who should send all of the chorus and the subordinate actors off the stage at the critical moment and stand under the limelight all alone.

In his attitude toward the white men in his own party Peary showed jealousy and what must certainly be called "unmanly selfishness." Therefore, until he shall have given some very solid proof of the charges he makes against Dr. Cook the world will be justified in believing that his attitude toward Cook may be simply part of that selfish disposition that was shown in the treatment of his white companions.

The average American, on the whole, will hope that Dr. Cook shall prove to be the first white man at the Pole. His attitude thus far seems to suit the character of a hero rather better than does the character of Peary.

The Death of M. W. Hazeltine

His Going Means a Loss to All Intelligent Men

The world that reads hears with sorrow of the death of M. W. Hazeltine, one of the world's learned, earnest and useful men.

He was a forceful writer, a man of great mental power and of wide knowledge. His principal work was the encouragement of men that do good work in literature, and the directing with wise criticism and praise of book buyers and readers.

Hazeltine was a critic in the best sense of the word. He sought for and found THAT WHICH IS GOOD. He did not take delight in malicious, frivolous or unkind criticism.

He made it his business to tell men where they could find thought worth reading. He pitied and ignored the weak, the failures.

Mayo W. Hazeltine was a Boston man, born in this city in 1841. He graduated from Harvard in 1862, and received the degree of A. M. there in 1866. He then went to Oxford University, England, for a course of study. He practiced law after his return to America, but soon gave it up and began his successful career as a literary critic.

Hazeltine was a benefactor of men. He selected the best books for others too hard at work to make careful selection for themselves. He was not content with careful selection, judicious praise and criticism. He gave to his own reader the essence of that which he read. He interpreted fairly and generously the spirit of writers reviewed.

Hazeltine was a learned man, honest and conscientious. He was brilliant in the best sense of the word. He had in this country few intellectual equals.

In his life among men feebly endowed with education and intellectual power, Hazeltine was like the disk of gold in Sir Robert Austin's experiment.

In a bath of melted lead is placed a disk of pure gold. When solidification is complete we find this apparently bizarre phenomenon: part of the gold, having left the disk, has traveled to the surface of the bath and become mixed with the lead."

Hazeltine was the intellectual disk of gold. He lived in a leaden age, one that showed but little gratitude for his work, little appreciation of his genius. But if the mass of lead in which he lived could now be analyzed it would be found that particles from the disk of gold are thoroughly mixed throughout the leaden mass.

Hazeltine is worthy of a monument, but he would not thank any man that should build him one. He lived in realities, had a thorough contempt for the tinsel and the flattery that please and reward mediocrity.

He has built his own monument—THOUGHT MORE VIGOROUS, KNOWLEDGE WIDER, IN THE MINDS OF MANY THOUSANDS OF MEN. That is no idle monument of metal. It is a working, living monument, a force that will benefit this country when the name of Hazeltine and other good workers shall long have been forgotten.

ELBERT HUBBARD'S ARTICLE —ON— THE WOMAN WHO DOES

Especially Written for the American

By ELBERT HUBBARD

Copyright, 1909, by American Journal Examiner

ELLA STARR YOUNG is Superintendent of Public Schools in the city of Chicago. She was recently selected to take the place which, up to her time, had always been filled by a man.

Her salary is ten thousand dollars a year, which was the amount that her predecessor was paid. She has charge of property valued at fifty million dollars.

She looks after six thousand teachers and two hundred and seventy-five thousand pupils. She hires and fires six hundred janitors.

Mrs. Young is the widow of a schoolmaster, but this did not weigh in the scale in her selection to the office. She is sixty-four years old.

She is the only woman I know of in the world who gets ten thousand dollars a year—and earns it. There are plenty of women who spend ten thousand a year. Last month a lady almanac in New York city was granted an allowance of thirty-six thousand a year, but this award was not based on her earning power. It was given simply because her former husband had the money. And he didn't earn the money, either. He lay under a cocoanut tree and the cocoanuts fell on him.

Man's Pay for Man's Work

Mrs. Young, however, is in another class. She does a man's work and very rightly gets a man's pay. Whether she would get a man's pay for doing a man's work if she lived in New York State is a question I respectfully refer you to my old college chum, Hon. Charles E. Hughes.

Mrs. Young has great executive ability. She is also judicial and diplomatic. She has a wide sympathy and an active imagination, without being lachrymose or mawkish in her emotions. She makes her points and holds them. She has the ability to decide, and is usually right. She is a seer and a prophet, for she realizes the needs of the future. Yet she is a true Fabian, and always is willing to accept what she can get, even if it is not all she would like.

She has the letting of lighting and heating contracts, also contracts for repairs, and in some instances building contracts. Millions of dollars pass through her hands. The thought of graft is too far removed from her to be imagined. This could not have been said of any of the men candidates for the place.

She has every quality which the position demands, and one more than any other genus could muster—that is, the outlook of motherhood.

So why shouldn't she have the position? It's a foolish question to ask, since nobody has hinted otherwise.

Nobody has carped at her having the position and doing the work, but Veritas, Old Subscriber and Pro Bono Publico have all carped and sneered at her having a man's pay.

It is quite probable that Veritas, Old Subscriber and Pro Bono Publico all wear whiskers, and no man with whiskers in this rapid age of the automobile should be seriously considered.

Mrs. Young fills the arduous position and the pay she receives is none too great. It would be twice as much if I had my way. In this thing of teaching, as a people we are very small and niggardly. When we get civilized we will set apart the greatest and best men and women in the land, and we will pay them enough, so that the offer of a pension will not be an insult to their ability to exercise the Savings Bank Habit.

The world needs more of this strong, able, hopeful, loving type of folk like Ella Starr Young—people who have initiative and who are able to carry responsibility.

Woman was the first homemaker—not usually she is a builder, while man, not usually and through centuries of habit, is a destroyer.

Most of the school teachers under Mrs. Young are women. It seems but common sense to suppose that a woman would know more about their needs and capacities than a man.

It also seems to be a commonplace to assume that a woman would know the needs of the children better than a man. That a woman should be penalized on account of her sex, and be compelled to do a like service as a man for half the pay seems a barbaric policy.

It is surely a short-sighted, economic policy that would deprive a woman of the right to take a big and responsible position simply because she is a woman.

A woman is a human being. The divine intelligence plays through her, exactly as through a man. Among the lower animals the female is often vastly superior to the male in many ways.

Among humans she will show herself the equal of man in every line of social, economic and industrial endeavor when given equal opportunity.

Freedom the Need

Very many men live on a low mental plane for the lack of the help of women with brains. But woman, as a whole, will never be the equal of man in mental reach until she is given the right and privilege of using her powers.

The race didn't develop, as long as we were thieves, serfs, villeins and chattels, looked after, controlled, repressed and suppressed by soldiers and priests.

The first requisite in growth is freedom. And with freedom must go responsibility. Let woman do anything along the line of the world's work which she can do, and let her be paid the same for a like service that we pay to the genus male.

In all that goes to make up mental worth, to decide wisely and execute justly, the Chicago superintendent of schools has just as much ability as the Governor of the State of New York.

And yet when it comes to having her political preferences recorded she is debarred, and in the eyes of the law is a perpetual minor. The only reason she cannot vote is because she is a woman. And John Temple Graves says that the reason women should not be allowed to vote is because they cannot bear arms.

However, women bear children, and bear responsibilities; and women are amenable before the law exactly the same as men. Yet we do not give her the right to express her choice as to whether she shall be electrocuted or be hanged. Neither do we let her say who shall be chosen to finally decide how she shall die and when.

Men, it seems to me, have to learn, one of which is that we gain freedom for ourselves only to give it to others.

A Vegetarian's Diary

By WEX JONES

AT last I have come to a realization of the horror of being carnivorous. I will become a vegetarian after dinner. I would begin right away, only I feel extremely hungry, and string beans don't seem so nourishing as beef, somehow.

Began as a vegetarian this morning on a breakfast of ham and eggs. It isn't such a bad life at that.

Boss of our vegetarian society met me this afternoon, and I told him it wasn't so bad after all, and that I had enjoyed my breakfast. He said ham was absolutely barred, but that eggs were all right. Told him I never knew before that ham could be divorced from eggs, but he said it must be done.

Potato croquettes and egg plant fritters for dinner at 8 p. m.

Went into pantry at 9 o'clock and finished up the cold potatoes.

Got up at 10:30 p. m. and ate the last of the egg plant.

Got up at 1 a. m. and tried to find something to eat. Nothing but raw potatoes. Waited until morning. Ordered six eggs for breakfast.

Ordered six more.

Nearly an hour until I can get some luncheon. See they are cooking baked beans. They will be good. Hope there will be plenty of pork in them.

Have been living on vegetables for ten days. Don't feel very good, after all. Begin to think it is cruel to eat vegetables exclusively. Suggested to boss of the society that if we can eat egg plant and also eggs, why not oysters with oyster plant. He said it would be too cruel to the oysters, which had homes and families, whereas eggs just lay wherever they were laid. It seems a shame that we should have to slight oysters so, but I must stick to the rules.

Beans cooked without anything but molasses don't amount to much. Could only eat two pounds of them. Tried to eat some peaches, but didn't have much appetite for them.

Feel somewhat light-headed this morning. Tried to estimate the number of eggs I have had in the six weeks, but couldn't count above 575,000, my mind is so wondering just now.

Had nothing to eat yesterday. On reflection I concluded that it was cruel to cut short the young life of a cabbage to satisfy a brutal hunger. Has not the humblest plant as much right to live its life in its own way as any of us, the self-styled superior race? The answer must be yes.

Have been living on water for two days, but now a thought occurs to me—is not water, too, a thing of life? Do we not talk of dead water (which, of course, no one can drink), and is not the other water alive? Have decided to cut out the water, too.

The air is full of fruits and vegetables with mocking forms. The ghosts of murdered tomatoes haunt me night and day.

How curious! The room I am in is all padded around the walls.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

STREET LIGHTS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I see by the papers that our official, who is called the Superintendent of Streets, has concluded another contract with the Rising Sun Lighting Company, for a new term of lighting our streets, and much emphasis is laid on the statement, that the price is to be at a reduced cost. This would appear that the city, and the people of it, would be saving money, through this operation; but you would take the trouble to send one of your boys up to Northampton street, any night, about the time that the street lamps should be lit, and heretofore have been lit, between Shawmut avenue and Tremont street, you will learn how the price is made low by this company. The lights in that neighborhood are not lit until long after dark, and it is a big thoroughfare for cars, and all vehicles, in that way the city is being deprived of what it pays for, and in these automobile times makes it very dangerous for foot passengers. The Mayor and the street official have both been written to several times about remedying this neglect, but no attention has been given to either of them, and the same state of affairs still continues. I thought that possibly by your calling public attention to a thing of such importance they may be compelled to have the city get what it pays for.

LIEUTENANT SHACKELTON IRISH.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

In your paper you describe Lieutenant Shackelton as being "English." As I have every reason to believe and know, the famous Antarctic explorer is Irish and has relatives in Dublin and in the North of Ireland. The fact of his being an officer in the English army does not rob him of his nationality nor Ireland of the honor of his distinguished career.
